Railway traffic between Cairo and Alexandria is now completely reestablished. The momentary uneasiness created by the fire at the arsenal has subsided.

The khedive conferred the grand [illegible] of the order of Osmanli upon General Sir [illegible].

A grand review of British troops was held in the square before Abdin palace in the centre of the city where the troops assembled after marching through the streets. The khedive and his ministers and a large number of notables were present. The streets were crowded with natives. The Indian contingent and naval brigade were warmly applauded. The march past the review was [illegible] at four o'clock and finished at 5:30. The strength of the force evidently made a great impression upon the Egyptians.

Prisoners of War.

CAIRO, Oct. 3.—A separate building is being fitted up for the reception of prisoners to be tried by court martial, including Arabi Pasha and Toulba Pasha. The court will convene on the same premises as that in which the prisoners are confined, in order to obviate the necessity of conveying them to and fro. The lower classes fail to realize the defeat of Arabi Pasha and the national cause. Amongst the commercial section and the middle classes a better feeling prevails. In influential native circles it is not expected a respect for the khedive can be restored.

E. Dwyer Gray Released.

DUBLIN, Sept. 30.—Judge Lawson has ordered the release of E. Dwyer Gray on the payment of £500.

Justice Lawson, in ordering the release of Gray, pointed out that since his imprisonment considerable change for the better had taken place in the tone of his paper, the Freeman's Journal. The judge said the action taken by himself and the law officers had been effectual in preventing the course of justice being impeded. The order of the court in regard to Gray's sureties was made to prevent any publications similar to the objectionable one from appearing, but in the event of such publications hereafter the executive had the full power necessary to deal with them. He was also, he added, not without hope that a reaction would spring up against the system of crime and outrage which had long disgraced the country.

John Dillon's Retirement.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Much speculation has been caused by John Dillon's retirement from public life, and it is the impression that he strongly disapproves of the Parnell policy, controlled by the Kilmainham treaty. Parnell and his followers, there is every reason to believe, will hold to the condition of that much-repudiated compact, and so endeavor to disarm and divide the opposition to the Gladstone administration at the approaching session. Dillon, like Davitt, is for a bolder and more uncompromising course. He would make no terms with the enemy.

Failure to Comprehend.

Salem Statesman.

The recent damaging disclosures made before the investigating committee have created quite a commotion among the faithful. Many of Mitchell's followers, seeing no way of escape from the difficulties surrounding them, have lost temper, and talk in a most unreasonable way about jobs having been put up, and tricks having been played in order to get at the facts of bribery and corruption known to abound on every hand. Such talk is simply idle and silly, and comes from a class of men who never having practiced fair means, or used honorable methods themselves, know not how to attribute any action of others to proper motives.

There was neither job nor trick in producing testimony before the investigating committee. That committee was created at the solicitation of Mr. Mitchell. There was an attempted job in its creation. It was by the resolution drawn by Mitchell himself, restricted to the investigation to the Nichols case alone. But the house defeated his plan of getting himself whitewashed by extending the power of the committee to all cases, very much to the disgust of the would-be whitewashed "boss." The suggestion now comes that Mr. Gilbert exposed Senator Waters' attempt to bribe him is a way he ought not to have done. Now the simple truth is that, long before any one knew of the details or the extent of the attempted bribery, it was known that Mitchell's friends were here in force with money to secure his election. It was known publicly that for two years Waters had been doing all that he could for Mitchell. He is not known to be over-scrupulous in his methods. The relations between himself and Mitchell were well known. It was a matter of public notoriety that Mitchell himself has had his eye upon Gilbert for a long time, and has been in consultation with him frequently. And it was as well known that Waters was after Gilbert, interviewing him on the senatorial question whenever he could. Now what member of the committee could shut his eyes to these facts and not see them? And what member of the committee, seeing these things, did not know that Gilbert could tell a story of bribery and corruption on the part of Waters if he only would? The committee acted upon this plan. In common, called Gilbert against his will, and got the damaging story.

The facts are known concerning other members, who, no doubt, will the committee does its duty, will be called and examined. The truth is that the doings of Mitchell and his devoted friends, Owens, Henderson, Tabor, Beeson, Davies, Lotan and others have satisfied this committee that there is not more than three or four of the fifty men now voting for Mitchell who have not in some way been brought to in a disgraceful manner. Any one of these men can tell a story similar to that of Gilbert and Nichols, and it needs neither a job nor trick to ascertain the fact.

Colvig reported the following from the committee on railroads, to whom it was referred:

S. B. 2—To regulate the transportation of passengers and freight by railroad corporations. "The minority of your committee recommend that it do not pass for the following reasons: The bill if passed would impose such severe restrictions on railroads as to discourage and retard the building of the great lines now in process of construction; that Oregon has such limited facilities for transportation that in the opinion of the minority any measure which would tend to cripple or delay the completion of these and other lines which are now about to be constructed would be prejudicial to the best interests of the people; that this bill is more exacting and embarrassing to railroad corporations than the laws of many older states whose railroad systems are manifold more complete than that of Oregon; that our state is in its infancy of point of population and internal improvements and that in order that the capital and population of the world shall continue to come and become permanently attached to our soil a sound policy would seem to dictate only those which have a tendency to encourage the building of such roads."

The bill was ordered engrossed for a third reading to-morrow.

The committee on railroads reported favorably on S. B. 7, to grant right of way and station grounds over state lands to the Oregon short line railway, and reported S. B. 14 back, with the recommendation that the same be referred to the judiciary committee, as the bill involves legal questions which can be more carefully considered before such committee; so referred.

S. B. 23, a bill to provide for the establishment of a board of railroad commissioners. Majority report by Bilyeu and Voorhees, recommending its passage with slight amendments; minority report by Colvig, recommending to reduce the number of commissioners from three to one, to amend section 4, by striking out lines 6 to 10 inclusive. The amendments of Bilyeu and Voorhees were severally adopted. The amendment of Colvig was also adopted. On motion of Bilyeu the bill was recommitted to a special committee. The president appointed on this committee, Bilyeu, Colvig and Reed.

S. B. 5—To define the terms land and real property for the purpose of taxation, was returned with the recommendation that it pass with certain amendments. The amendments were severally adopted.

On motion S. B. 2 was made a special order of business for to-morrow at 2 o'clock. Senate adjourned.

House.

House met at 10.

Journal read and approved.

Message from senate informing house of appointment of Colvig, Sifers and Simon under house concurrent resolution 14.

Also, concurrence in H. C. R. 16, inviting Hon. [illegible] and Schwatka to lecture.

Marston introduced resolution prohibiting introduction of bills last twelve days of session unless appropriation bills, except by unanimous consent; also, hereafter no member be allowed to speak longer than ten minutes, without consent of the house.

Mr. Nichols introduced resolution directing committee on investigation to take testimony of each witness as soon as same can be reduced to writing, and submit same to house immediately; as soon as all testimony shall have been taken committee to submit findings to the house.

Warm discussion ensued, friends of Mitchell attempting to defeat its adoption by motion to lay on table, indefinitely postpone, and by reference of it to investigating committee. It was finally, after an hour's discussion, adopted.

House then proceeded to the special order, which was consideration of H. B. 21, providing for appropriation to complete and furnish insane asylum.

Went into committee of the whole, with Plummer in the chair. Committee adopted the amendment recommended by special committee providing for furnishing the building only. Hour for joint convention having arrived committee rose, reported progress to house and asked leave to sit at 2 P. M. Report was received and request granted.

Dufur presented petition from citizens of Wasco asking for division of that county.

JOINT CONVENTION.

Senate entered for joint convention, all members being present.

Proceeded to twentieth ballot:

Mitchell, 38; Shattuck, 26; Richard Williams, 9; Failing, 10; George H. Williams, 1.

Hayes paired with Dunbar, and Morris with Jamison, who was sick.

Senate retiring, convention adjourned. Kelly and Stappington were granted leave of absence.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

House reassembled at two and went into committee of the whole to continue consideration of H. B. 21.

Hand moved as an amendment that the appropriation of $45,000 for furnishing building recommended by special committee be reduced to $20,000.

Gilbert opposed the amendment and presented an itemized statement of necessary furniture and concluded by saying it could not be done for less than $42,000.

Isom moved an amendment to amendment that appropriation be made $40,000 or so much thereof as is necessary to furnish needed apartments till meeting of next legislature; carried.

The bill was then read as a whole and adopted.

On motion of Ford committee rose and reported bill with amendments and recommended passage as amended.

Committee rose and report was received and adopted and was ordered engrossed and read third time to-morrow.

The bill as amended provides for furnishing the new insane asylum and appropriates $40,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to furnish for accommodations until next session.

Adjourned till 7:30 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

House was called to order at 7:30.

Leave of absence was granted Gilbert.

Marquam asked to be excused from further serving on the committee of investigation; granted.

THE UNIVERSITY BILL.

House went into committee of the whole with Plummer in the chair to further consider H. B. 117, aiding the University of Oregon. Some slight amendments were made, and the bill as amended provides for a tax of one-tenth of a mill on the dollar of all taxable property, to be placed in a fund known as the university fund, out of which $500 is to be appropriated yearly for the support of the university. The balance of money remaining in the fund to be subject to the control of the board of regents for the purpose of purchasing apparatus, enlarging the library, improving the building, etc. The committee then reported the bill with amendments recommending its passage and that the bill be engrossed and put on third reading and final passage to-morrow at 2 P. M.; report adopted. The bill was ordered engrossed and will be read a third time to-morrow. This bill is the one which was founded on the Villard offer of $50,000 endowment to the university on certain conditions. The house did not think proper to comply with the conditions imposed and in amending it totally ignored the Villard offer.

BETWEEN TWO CITIES.

Portland to Mexico.

III.

The road from San Blas to Tepic, after crossing a few leagues of low, level ground, reaches the foothills and passes a succession of wretched hamlets, the tenant houses of great sugar plantations. Stopped by the rain, we spent the night in one of these places, and had clean beds; but the familiar neighborhood of hogs and dogs, with grunts and growls and bad odors, certainly deprived the season of a part of that quiet supposed of right to belong to it. Next morning, the 4th, we reached the Bola de Oro (golden ball) hotel of Tepic. A neat, even pretty city of probably 20,000 souls, at a height of 3000 feet above sea level. The morning was fresh and cool, after the weeks spent in the low "hot lands," and made the ride delicious. As we entered the town the streets and walls seemed to have been newly washed by the last night's rains. It was the first inland Mexican town I had seen, and is more attractive than any inland city of South or Central America that I know. It has been built by wealthy men owning plantations towards the coast, or engaged in the foreign commerce of San Blas. The hotel is in front of the Plaza de Armas, which is one of the prettiest I ever saw in this or any other country, being a well cultivated and carefully tended tropical garden.

I had to go out for meals, and found an excellent table at the house of Dona Mauricia, a widow lady, who had learned catering and cooking in San Francisco. The landlady who ran the hotel had rather a plunderer's eye to business, possibly a Spanish characteristic. As my room contained three or four single beds, and all very hard, I took the mattress from one of the spare cots to add to its comfort, receiving notice therefor the next morning that I would be expected to pay for two beds. But I told the old lady I certainly should pay for only one, and that she must take the others out of the room, if she didn't like them used. That night my mozo piled all four mattresses on one cot, and when the matron came next morning she threw up her hands and her eyes, and said: "Ah, sir! You are so droll." But I heard no more of the extra charge, and we parted excellent friends.

The cost of transporting baggage by stage in this country is extravagant beyond reason, so I arranged to have mine go forward by donkeys to Guadalajara, where it would be put on carts for the city of Mexico, reserving only a valise with clothing for the road. But the nights in the stage became cold as we ascended to the high plateaus and I often regretted that I had not retained for the occasion, my overcoats and blankets, for I had to buy them at Guadalajara.

At three o'clock on the morning of the 7th, I left Tepic in the stage for Guadalajara. It was a Concord (or tray) coach drawn by ten mules; two on the pole and two platoons ahead, of four mules each. The enterprise was managed by a driver and assistant driver, who sat together on the box, and two men, sometimes boys, who ran by the sides of the team and whipped up the animals, yelled at them, and pelted them with stones. I think all Tepic must have been awakened with the noise of our getting away, as we rolled noisily, in full shout, over the rough cobble stone pavement of the streets.

At seven we stopped for breakfast at a stage house, and an exceptionally wretched place it was. A cup of tea and a plate of stewed beef with tortillas, a sort of flap jack of corn, which I shall have more to say about hereafter. There were no spoons, no knives nor forks; but, after the custom of the natives I contrived, by making little cones with bits of the tortilla to get the stew into my stomach, which after all was just what I wanted and the object of all eating. We never afterwards found any "accommodations" quite so mean as this and I suspect it was not a regular station, but availed of because the condition of the roads prevented our getting further along.

We rode till 11 that night, having made twenty-eight leagues, and were glad then to stop at the plain little village of [illegible], where we found a good dinner, and clean though rather hard beds, which we were forced to leave at 4 the next morning, getting coffee and starting forward at 5. By 10 we had reached the edge of what is known as the Barrancas, a formidable ravine, at the edge of which we took saddle horses, the declivity being impassable for wheels. We were two hours getting to the bottom, which is 3000 feet below the crest from which we had descended.

The horrible character of the road thus far had [illegible] behind time, and we found ourselves to-day, at noon, hungry, but not near a hotel. However, we turned into a little shanty, and with bread, coffee and a greasy stew, which we ate by means of tortillas, without spoon or fork, we managed to stave off hunger till night, when we found a good house at Magdalena, by the lake of that name.

The next morning—9th of September—we left Magdalena at 3 o'clock, hoping to reach Guadalajara the same evening. We were in good time for lunch at Tequila, a town of great importance in the midst of the Mescal region. It lies in a deep valley several hundred feet below the ridges traversed by the highway, the descent being by a well-paved zig zag road protected by parapets of strong masonry on the outside. This masonry has existed for over two centuries, and remains in perfect preservation, as does the cobblestone pavement of the road. Although the top of the walls, which are a trifle more than a foot thick, is composed of small pebbles, they are as smooth and complete as the day they were finished, the walls remaining monolithic by reason of the excellent character of the lime and its preparation.

The town of Tequila is famous for the distillery of an alcoholic liquor from the juice of the mescal (Agave Americana) to which the name of tequila wine, or simply tequila, has been given. It is a white liquor, clear as water having somewhat the odor of Scotch whisky, and makes up well in hot punches with sugar and lemons. Which is to say, that, like all other liquors, the less of the original taste you get the better you like it.

The room in which we got our lunch, or breakfast, or what you like, amused us a great deal. It was a common—very common—restaurant, but as good as any in the place, and one wall was nearly covered with the brown earthen dishes made in the country. They were hung by handles on nails and radiated from a big pitcher in the centre to another rim of tiny mugs and plates of a thimble capacity. We found this system of decoration prevalent throughout the country, in private houses of the rather common people as well as in the lower class of restaurants. When I first saw it I imagined it a quiet satire on our dear "esthetes." It is nothing of the kind. The dishes have to be cared for and why not be artistically arranged? 'Tis a combination of the useful with the ornamental, which is more than can be said of the American idiots, who have decorated their houses with fans, useless in 46 degrees north latitude; with paper umbrellas and wooden plates, which they call plaques, without knowing what is a "plaque," and which they have previously spoiled with dreadful daubs, they call—shades of the artists! what do they call them?

As I have said, we ought to have reached Guadalajara to-night, but when we got to the little hamlet of Santa Cruz, at five o'clock, we found the roads so bad from rain and the vicinity of Guadalajara has such a reputation for its banditti, that we bribed the driver to stop for the night and let us enter the city by daylight.

It was rather a hard place for rest but not so uncomfortable as a bed in a creek, or a mud puddle, or a trip to town in only a suit of scant underclothing, left by robbers, who fancy they have more need than we of coat and trowsers. There was one bed to be had and that was taken by the only lady in the company. They brought me a home-made bedstead, across the frame of which a rope had been lashed in meshes three or four inches square, and on this I tried to sleep when I was tired enough to begin. I got up at daylight with a deeply indented map in my back of Portland streets without the [illegible] I felt that I would rather be in those streets than have them in me. It was a bright morning and I took care the stage got off early. We were accompanied by a strong mounted military guard, who patrol the roads in all that region to protect the diligence and other travelers from the bandit robbers of the country.

This brings me to mention a long, carefully written letter that appeared lately in a Boston paper, from the pen of a writer who assures the American public that traveling in this country is as secure as in any part of the United States east of the Rocky mountains, and more secure than in the states west of that region. This is pretty careful observation for a man who traveled from the port of Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico, and back, on a train having a special car containing the military escort, without which it never runs nor would dare to run, and who passed probably two weeks in the capital, and must certainly have known that the horse cars in the suburbs run in clusters of three for mutual protection, accompanied, each car, by an armed guard.

The country is "safe" only as the energy of the government makes it safe. As I said before, robbery as a custom has disappeared, but under the constant presence of armed police. Yet the diligence was robbed on the 13th of this July in the vicinity of Guadalajara, and last week an armed band of thieves to the number of ten or more, entered the house of the tax collector of Tacubaya, a considerable town a league from the capital, and nearly killed the collector and his wife with knives, while they robbed his safe.

Robbery and murder are rife enough in our own great cities, but it is the kind that goes single-handed in the dark, and from which the best civilization has not yet cleared itself in any part of the world. Robbery in Spanish America is the crime of organized bands, almost communities, and this it is that governments have to fight in these countries and that keeps every man always on the alert.

It is not so very long since public opinion clamored against robbery on the road; and "respectable" citizens are pointed at who began business as highwaymen, and who have abandoned it not because of any improved "tone" in the atmosphere, but because it is not safe and therefore does not pay.

While we are making these reflections the stage has been thundering along the streets of Guadalajara, drawing everybody to the doors and windows, and now hauls up at the Hotel Hidalgo.

"God Tempers the Wind."

Chambers' Journal.

In Herbert's collection of maxims, published under the title of his "Pendulum," there is the beautiful proverb which tells us that "To a close shorn sheep God gives wind by measure." This proverb was adopted and improved by Sterne in his "Sentimental Journey," we learn that "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," and in this form it has passed into the [illegible] [illegible] one's thought.

Prineville News: Thursday of last week Messrs. Bud Thompson and Frank Irvine delivered to buyers 100 head of beef cattle. The cattle are in fine condition and will be driven to the Portland market via the Barlow route. Down on the Samish flats are several thousand acres of grain that was overflowed early last spring, and subsequently sprouted and partially filled, but has not been harvested. This land will be a regular paradise for sportsmen this fall, as the ducks and geese will congregate there by the million, and will make that section of country their winter feeding grounds.

Port Townsend Argus: Our beach this morning presented a lively scene from the presence of a large number of Indians, camped over night on their way home from the great hop fields of Puyallup. Some twenty or twenty-five large canoes were filled with men, women and children, belonging to Port Rupert, B. C., and about a dozen canoes filled with Clalams from Dungeness and Port Angeles made our beach look as lively as in the "days of '49."

Post-Intelligencer: Julius Lange of Squak, King county, succeeded during the past season in raising canary seed, and he is not a little jubilant thereat. This is one of the few things that, it is supposed, cannot be generally raised in the United States, it growing in Florida. It is also said that five or six bushels an acre is a common yield and seven or eight a very good one. Mr. Lange believes he can raise 12 or 15, and at prevailing prices he can make a good deal of money in the production. He will endeavor to raise a larger quantity another year.

J. W. Walter, of Walter Bros., cattle dealers in the Crab Creek country, states that the blackleg disease in cattle made its appearance in that region last August during the hot spell, resulting in the loss of three-fourths of their calves. Messrs. Lanning, Bigham and Brumheller and Horace Parker are also heavy losers from the same cause. He states that men thoroughly acquainted with diseases in cattle have decided that this blackleg is no more or less than what is called diphtheria in children. The animal fills up in the throat and chokes to death. After they are skinned it is found that the flesh is black, as is the blood. They are trying salt and saltpetre in equal quantities, with some success. The disease does not attack cattle over a year old except in rare instances. Hundreds of these calves have died in all the region north of the railway, in what is known as the Big Bend, inflicting a loss that will be very perceptible, the coming year or two.

A Fair and Moderate Opinion.

The Oregon City Enterprise, which hitherto has not participated in the discussion as to the senatorial question, says in its last issue:

We do not believe that any disinterested republican will for a moment entertain the idea of frittering away the session without an election. Since Mr. Mitchell's election appears clearly out of the question, it becomes the duty of republicans to harmonize if possible upon some other man. No more valuable time should be spent in the vain attempt to accomplish the impossible. It now devolves upon the members from Clackamas, who have been voting for Mitchell, to adopt a course for themselves which will be honorable to them and satisfactory to their constituents. To continue to vote for Mitchell beyond the point where there is no reasonable hope of his election, or yet to vote for any man whom he may select without regard to other than personal considerations, will not be either. We are among those who believe there are many men who would do honor to the state in the capacity of senator. Give us one of these—we care not which. This is no time to urge local candidates, but we will suggest that a Clackamas county man has already received a highly complimentary vote which they might now augment with good reason and much hope. This is the natural course for them to take and we hope they will do so.

Why an Englishman Must Find the North Pole.

London Saturday Review.

It is natural that as long as other nations continue the task of arctic exploration, Englishmen will and must take their share of the work. Even if it could be mathematically demonstrated that nothing could be gained by reaching the north pole, it would still seem worth while to get there before anybody else. A maritime nation must cherish its reputation for enterprise, and spare no effort to keep up the spirits of its seamen. The English sailors' cheerful contempt for foreigners is, no doubt, unphilosophical and even barbarous. It is a bad instance of the "patriotic bias," which, to the sorrow of many worthy persons, will not allow men to look at life all round without prejudice. Nevertheless it has its uses. This conviction of superiority would receive a heavy blow if England allowed herself to be once for all outstripped by other nations in arctic explorations. If a Swedish or American crew were absolutely to reach the north pole—which pace Captain Nares is not impossible—it would amount almost to a deposition of a British sailor from his place. It would still be a greater humiliation if the feat were done by a crew of mere Mediterranean seamen, even though they were Dalmatians.

The Daily Oregonian

FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 6, 1882.

"BOSSING THE PARTY."

It is a favorite allegation with some of Mitchell's supporters, if not with all, that "THE OREGONIAN is trying to boss the republican party." To those who oppose Mitchell the statement is often put in this way: "You say you are opposed to bossism. Are you willing to take THE OREGONIAN or its editor as the boss of the party? Might not Mitchell as well be boss as that paper or its editor?" The assumption on which this statement is founded has not even the merit of being an ingenious suggestion of falsehood. There is no contest between this journal and J. H. Mitchell for control of the republican party, or for pre-eminence in it. Mitchell, indeed, wants to control the party, but THE OREGONIAN does not. His profession is that of a boss politician and party dictator, desiring to wield all the power of the party machine to support his pretensions, to build up a personal following, to distribute the offices and to control all the party's operations. On the other hand THE OREGONIAN seeks nothing from party; no one connected with it asks for office or would accept office; it doesn't want to "run" the party, and makes no pretension to authority in the party or over the party; it has no favorite candidates, and never says as Mitchell does, "I am the great boss, and if you don't elect me you shall not elect anybody." The difference is as broad as any difference can possibly be. Mitchell wants everything from party and therefore seeks to be a party dictator; THE OREGONIAN on the other hand asks nothing and would accept nothing from party, but resists the arrogance and insolence of the boss' dictation, as a public journal ought to do in the interest of untrammeled political action and honorable independence.

Nor do the eighteen members who refuse to vote for Mitchell seek to "dictate" to the party. They have taken their stand in no man's interest. They do not say, "Here is the man who shall be elected to the senate, or no man shall be elected." They hold that no section or faction of the party, large or small, much less any one man, has a right to set up boss rule over it. They resist the extraordinary and groundless assumption, till now never heard of in Oregon, that one man has a right to demand election to the United States senate, and to force this result against all protesters. They are partisans of no man, but are simply republicans who hold that no man's partisans have just right to set up their chief as the party's boss and demand for him in the name of the party obedience and homage. While they are far from claiming the right to dictate to the party or to enthrone a boss over it, they are just as far from assenting to such usurpation when it is attempted by others. The boss faction presents the one man whom they find most objectionable of all men in the state, and in opposing him they both resist the pretensions of the boss system and declare against a man whom they justly regard as unworthy of their support and of the position to which he so indecently aspires.

This is not a personal matter. No reasons merely of a personal sort could inspire or sustain the opposition made to J. H. Mitchell. The opposition lies deeper; it is founded on immovable principles which relate to the character of the man, the history of his life and of his ways in politics. The very methods he employs to force his election—the most arrogant of the methods of bossism—deepen the opposition and add force to the resolve of his opponents never to vote for him. It is not an effort to "boss the party," but a determination that he shall not boss it. It is resistance to the principle of bossism, not a desire to establish it, or to substitute one boss for another. The very essence of bossism is the pretense that there is "only one man" in the party. This is the position of Mitchell and his supporters. Should it be allowed to prevail we would have a Mitchell party and no republican party. We shall see whether every man is to be ruled out of the republican party who refuses to accept the boss and the doctrine that he is the "only man."

H. W. S.

NINETY YEARS OF PROGRESS.

General Francis A. Walker, the accomplished superintendent of the census, has presented in a recent number of The Century magazine, an excellent and instructive general review of his great work, in advance of the appearance of the bound volumes. He has traced in a remarkably interesting manner the territorial and population growth of the United States since 1790. Ninety-two years in the life of a nation is a short span—a mere beginning of its years of statehood. Considering this fact, the results accomplished in American development during that time are wonderful. They arrest attention and excite admiration by their vastness.

Starting with a strip of territory included by seventeen degrees of latitude, and extending to the Mississippi river, the republic contained in 1790, 820,000 square miles, with a population of 3,929,214. Then there were 4.9 inhabitants to the square mile. The same total would to-day furnish 1.3 inhabitants to every square mile of our territory. The nation then boasted of six cities having a population of 8000 or more. Agriculture and fisheries occupied the main attention of the people, and foreign trade was of the most limited character. Cotton was not exported, and its position as king was not obtained until after the invention of the cotton gin.

Coming down thirty years from 1790, or to the census of 1820, Gen. Walker takes another view of the nation. At that time the territory of the United States had been pushed to the base of the Rocky mountains and extended even to the Pacific coast on the north. Florida had been added to the nation, and the territory of the United States comprised about 2,000,000 square miles. The population had increased to 9,633,822. Instead of six cities we now have thirteen with a population of less than 500,000. In 1820 it can be said that the nation had fairly made a start. Its population was scattered and agriculture was still the main reliance. Cotton had taken the front rank in American industries. The census of 1850 showed another extension of territory, out of which Oregon, Texas, California and other states have grown. The area of the country had expanded to 3,000,000 square miles, and the population had increased to 23,167,262. In 1850 the cities are found to number eighty-five, with an aggregate population of 3,000,000. At that time the country was entering a course of manufacturing, and the wonderful gold and silver developments had commenced.

The thirty years from 1850 to 1880 has covered the critical period in the history of the nation, but in spite of the war the record of advance has been kept good, and the nation passes its tenth census with an increase of territory in the northwest and southwest, and with a population of over 50,000,000 of people. In 1790 it was poor, weak and without influence; in 1820 it was extending its boundaries, but was still without foreign trade or home industries. In 1850 it had consolidated its territory and had commenced the work of a nation. In 1880 it had passed all its competitors, and in industrial and governmental development takes the acknowledged lead of all nations.

Such, in brief, is the story of a national life of about ninety years. It attracts the attention of the world because it has no precedent in history. Never was a republic so exalted among the nations of the earth in the same period of time, or in a period of ten times that duration. At the rate the union has grown within these ninety years, its progress within the next century will pass the bounds of the wildest imagination. The thought of our future greatness is enough to quicken the mind and thrill the heart of the dullest man.

Gen. Butler may never be governor of Massachusetts, but he will keep trying as long as he lives. He is entering on his fifth candidacy for that office. These several efforts illustrate the strange persistency of his character and his masterful desire for the office, regardless of what party he climbs in on. Two of his assaults on the office were made before the war, of course as a democrat. In one of the attempts he polled 50,000, and in the other but 6000 votes. He tried for the nomination before the republican convention in 1871, but failed. From that time his coolness toward the republican party increased, and in 1878 he became the candidate of the greenbackers. In that campaign Judge Abbott, who was president of the convention which has just nominated him, was the candidate of the silk stocking, blue-blooded democrats who bolted Butler's nomination, but Butler was the choice of the democrats, for he led Abbott almost 100,000. In 1879 he tried it again, and was beaten by Long, John Quincy Adams being the straight democratic candidate. Up to this time we have no report of a bolt, and Butler will probably be the only candidate against the republicans, and he will no doubt poll the democratic strength. All the many eloquent and descriptive epithets, which were the democratic stock in trade in so many campaigns in the old Bay state when Butler was a republican candidate, will be filed away in the limbo of departed democratic vagaries, called principles, to be used against him no more for ever, for he is home again, where he will probably remain for the balance of his natural life.

W. S.

J. H. Mitchell betrayed Oregon and the whole Pacific coast in the matter of the Hawaiian treaty. That treaty puts a monopolist's spoon into the sugar bowl of every family west of the Rocky mountains, and robs the United States treasury of millions of dollars. But the term of the treaty has nearly expired, and the sugar monopoly which it has created wants it continued. Mitchell would be their man. They could afford to pay his lobby at Salem, to furnish the money for all such enterprises as that in which Waters has been caught, and to "put up" for whatever else the circumstances or situation might require. What has this treaty done for Oregon? It has robbed the people of $200,000 a year in the increased cost of their sugar; it has robbed the national treasury of an equal annual sum in duties that otherwise would be paid here, and has annihilated the direct trade of Oregon with the Hawaiian islands, which trade formerly was an extensive and profitable one. Now that the treaty is about to lapse Mitchell would be a proper man to serve in the senate the monopoly which the treaty has created. One hundred thousand dollars would be a small sum to pay for such service as he rendered before, and the amount, or five times as much, could be taken at once from the people by marking up the sugar price list.

It is said that the ring is making great efforts to obtain petitions from different localities throughout the state, to be addressed to members of the legislature urging them to elect Mitchell. All petitions of this kind are open to suspicion. They are not the work of the people, but of the members of a desperate political ring. In every case it will be found that some one who has a job on hand or in view is moving in the matter. As a rule such papers are no expression of the opinions even of those who sign them. It is easier for many to sign such a paper, when it is pressed with importunity, than to refuse, and others again are imposed on through various methods of misrepresentation. Again, while some well known signatures may be procured, the mass of names may be fictitious. For instance, it is said that a petition bearing over one thousand names has been sent from Portland. It would be safe to say that no member from Multnomah knows or ever heard of one-third of the persons whose names purport to be written on the paper. Such documents, prepared or manufactured to order, are estimated at their just value by every sensible man.

H. W. S.

The bottle-holders of the boss, who, two or three weeks ago, were loudly declaring that there would be an election at once and that their chief would be successful, are now as loudly declaring that there shall be no election at all, since he can't win. But the members of the legislature will think over the matter seriously before the time for adjournment of the session. There will be hesitation on the part of the republican majority to carry the differences of the present contest into the next general election, with the moral certainty that two democratic senators would be the result. Owing to republican disgust and revolt in consequence of Mitchell's offensive prominence in the management of the party Oregon for several years has been represented by two democratic senators. There will be some cogitation of this fact by the republican members of the present legislature before they come to any hasty conclusion to afford their political opponents this advantage again. All this and more too will be thought over before any final resolution is taken to adjourn the present session without an election.

Our consul at Zurich, in a letter to the state department, gives some interesting facts as to the dairy interest in Switzerland. Three causes, he says, impress him as furnishing the foundation of Swiss dairy success: First, good sweet grass; second, pure running water; third, systematic economy. The consul puts this question: "If the Swiss can do well selling milk at 2 3-10 cents a quart from cows costing $100 apiece, fed from grass at $300 to $400 an acre, what ought western Americans be able to do, selling milk at the same price, buying cows at $50 apiece, and grazing land at $50 an acre?" The consul believes that there are three reasons why milk producing is not enormously remunerative in the United States, especially in the west, as follows: First, the neglect of properly fertilizing, draining and watering the meadows; second, dear labor, which could be wholly counterbalanced by proper use of manure heaps; third, our enormously expensive fences.

The legality of the prohibitory amendment to the Iowa constitution, adopted June 27, is to be tested in an agreed case, wherein a brewery firm sues a saloonkeeper to recover the value of beer furnished the first two weeks in the past month. The defendant admits the purchase of the beer, but denies the right of the plaintiffs to recover in a suit at law for the reason that at the time of the purchase the plaintiffs were engaged in the business of brewing and selling beer contrary to the amended constitution. The case is to be carried through the highest courts.

It is stated by our special reporter at Salem that it is now Mitchell's intention to allow no senator to be elected this session. Very well; we shall have another legislature in 1884, and those who may now resolve to obstruct business will not be in it. Nor will J. H. Mitchell deem it worth while to be there. We suspect, however, in spite of all the talk and bluff of the lobby and the baffled boss, the members will conclude before the final adjournment that they have a duty to perform, and that they would do well to perform it.

Defeat of the republican party is highly probable both in New York and Pennsylvania. There has been too much machine work, too much "bossing" by the administration. If defeat shall have a chastening effect and induce a return to popular judgment in the choice of candidates and direction of the party there will be no loss but actual gain.

The New Northwest is jubilant over the adoption of the woman suffrage amendment by the legislature. Its exultation is natural, for it is only just to say that the New Northwest has been almost the sole agency in working up the public sentiment which has brought this amendment to its present stage.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

SALEM, Oct. 5, [illegible] P. M.—To-day's ballot gave Mitchell 38 votes, one less than yesterday and two less than the day before. This apparent loss is only temporary, and is occasioned by the absence of two of his supporters, who are paired with democrats. So far as the vote is concerned, the situation to-day showed no change either for or against Mitchell. It was circulated on the streets early in the day that Eakin of Lane, who left Mitchell two days ago, would return to-day, but he voted for Geo. H. Williams, as before.

The investigating committee finished taking testimony in the Waters bribery case day before yesterday, but has not yet reported. In considering the testimony the sessions of the committee have been secret, but it is generally understood that Marquam opposes making a report which will reflect upon either Mitchell or Waters. Jamison, democratic member of the committee, will not agree to this, but is willing to sign a report commending Gilbert's course, expressing a belief of the truth of Gilbert's statement and censuring Waters, but saying nothing about Mitchell. Patterson, republican, and member of the eighteen, is of the opinion that the report ought to find the facts upon the attempted bribery as shown by the testimony. Being unable to agree, Jamison and Patterson desired to submit the testimony to the house without findings, to which Marquam objected. The house is growing restive under the unreasonable delay, and to-day a resolution was introduced by a member of the eighteen, requiring the committee to proceed and take testimony in all cases of alleged bribery, report it to the house as taken, and make the report after the whole testimony shall be taken. The resolution was bitterly opposed by the Mitchell people, under the leadership of Tanner, and most of the forenoon was consumed in filibustering upon it. Every resource of parliamentary practice was employed to defeat it, but it was finally passed by the votes of those who are opposed to smothering the testimony in the bribery cases. The committee will probably report to-morrow.

There is now no doubt but that Mitchell will attempt to deadlock the session. I have the authority of a senator who votes for Mitchell for the statement that a paper is being circulated among Mitchell's supporters to the effect that the signers agree to stand by him to the end of the session and to vote for no other person. The same authority says that this paper has been signed by more than twenty republicans, and my most reliable information is that it has been signed by 21. It is claimed that ten more will sign it, but from the number who declare that they will not have a part in such an arrangement, it is doubtful whether more than 25 signers can be secured. It is certain that this effort to blockade the proper business of the legislature will drive from Mitchell at least three or four of his present supporters.

We view with serious apprehension the growing tendency of the times toward corrupting expenditures of money to control elections to public offices. The peril to our institutions is extreme. Reform, prompt and thorough, is demanded by every consideration of safety. No party deserves support except as it adheres to important and enduring principles; and we, therefore, urge the people to so select their candidates and so to govern their votes that these principles of the republican party shall not fail to be enforced.—Massachusetts Republican Platform.

The announcement of a ballot on senator in the Oregon legislature gets into the Buffalo Courier under the head of "Criminal News." Our "only man's" fame is wider than any one had supposed.

[illegible]

FANCY WORK.

[illegible] as we attempted in yesterday's issue [illegible] the varied attractions of this department [illegible] a task that comprehended even [illegible] each deserving article displayed, [illegible] upon [illegible] the more important [illegible] things deserving men[illegible]. Among these [illegible] a pair [illegible] French knot work, by Mrs. D. W. [illegible] brown cashmere and [illegible] satin, [illegible] in spray [illegible] by Mrs. [illegible] patch work quilts by Mrs. H. B. Campbell, Miss Williams, Mrs. N. Hall, Mrs. R. T. [illegible] and Mrs. S. E. Peters. This patchwork is [illegible] maze of bright scraps of silk, [illegible] displaying economy and industry on the part of workers. Mrs. [illegible] a piano stool [illegible] work [illegible] and "feather edge." Mrs. Geo. P. Holman, a banner of [illegible] satin and plush, embroidered. Miss Anna [illegible] a similar article in pale [illegible] satin. Mrs. [illegible] Bates, a banner in [illegible] and gold and [illegible]. These banners are quite popular as wall decorations, [illegible]. There are hundreds other articles in this collection that are equally deserving with any that have been named and the only way to appreciate them is to visit the fair during the remaining two days and evenings and completely inspect the display.

J. B. GARRISON AND SEWING MACHINES.

We referred briefly some days ago to Mr. J. B. Garrison's, the general sewing machine agent, display at the fair. His exhibit deserves much more than a passing notice. In fact it is the most elaborate and complete exhibit in the pavilion. It embraces all the best machines in use. We see there the Howe, Davis, Crown, "D." Howe, Wilson, New Home, improved Singer, Royal St. John and the Household and White machines. The two last named Mr. Garrison is the general agent for. They are without doubt far superior to any other machine in the market. All the other named machines are excellent, and many ladies affirm his list of machines comprises all of the really good light-running sewing machines now made. At Mr. Garrison's sewing machine store on Third street, between Morrison and Yamhill, one can examine and test all of these machines, and we do not think that there is a lady in the land who could not select one to suit her at his establishment.

THE CENTENNIAL GATE—A USEFUL INVENTION.

Messrs. Swartz & Bartmes exhibit one of the most useful inventions in the pavilion. Their stand is at the west end of machinery hall, where the centennial gate, which they exhibit, can be seen in operation each day and evening. There is no doubt but what they have attained perfection on the gate question. They have a gate that is cheap, a gate that it impossible to get out of working order. It can be built two or twenty feet in the clear, or any desired width, and out of light or heavy lumber. It has no hinges to break, no post-holes to dig, no mortices to rot out, and no posts to sag. It can be moved to any part of the farm or premises with ease and without injury. It is not affected by the weather. The centennial can be opened or shut without getting off your horse or out of the wagon or buggy, or without letting go your lines. Every time it shuts it locks itself securely against all stock. In fact it is a marvel of perfection and usefulness, and should be seen in operation. By all means go and examine it at the pavilion.

C. H. MEUSSDORFFER.

The elegant display made by C. H. Meussdorffer, the popular hatter, still attracts great attention. His store, too, at 151 Front street, is constantly crowded by purchasers, who know by a long acquaintance with him that he will treat them squarely. Visitors will find his exhibit near the center of the main hall.

THE CLASS OF 1882.

The law students of the class of 1882 gave a banquet to their friends at Amos Strong's oyster parlors in Salem last evening, there being, in addition to the members of the class, about thirty invited guests, including representatives of the bench, bar and press. Mr. F. P. Mays, of The Dalles, was selected as president of the evening. The edibles being cleared away and the liquids introduced, the following toasts were announced and responded to:

"The supreme court of Oregon"—proposed by E. P. Boise, Jr., of Salem, and responded to by Hon. John Kelsay, of Corvallis.

"Our lawyer friends present"—proposed by Paul R. Deady, of Portland, and responded to by W. M. Kaiser, of Salem.

"The Press," proposed by P. C. Sullivan, Jr., and responded to by Frank E. Hodgkin, of Salem.

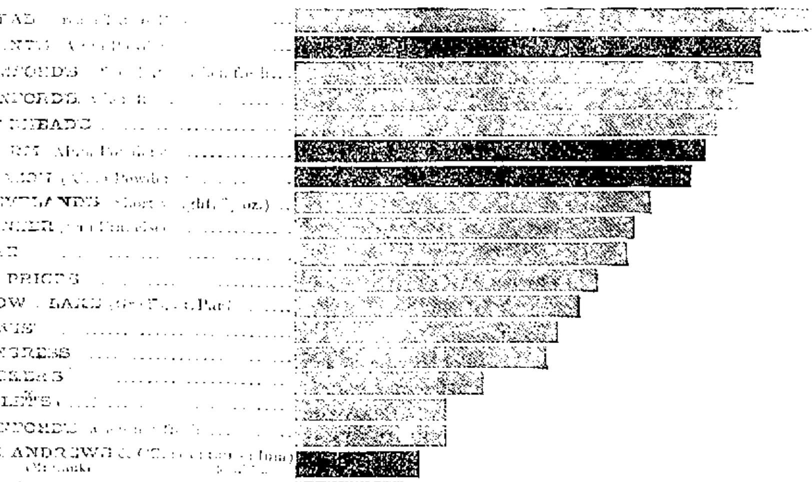
COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.



The above Diagram illustrates the comparative strength of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A one pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated in the above diagram. This practical test for strength by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the ROYAL BAKING POWDER knows by experience, that while it costs a few cents per pound more than the ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the ROYAL BAKING POWDER will convince any fair-minded person of these facts.

While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum baking powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS, DRS. LOVE AND MOTT:

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.
"E. G. LOVE, Ph. D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure.
"H. A. MOTT, Ph. D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance.
"HENRY MORTON, M. D., President Stevens Institute Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome.
"S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

"June 29, 1882. I have made a careful analytical test of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the open market here, and in the original package. I find it to be a cream of tartar powder of the highest degree of strength, containing nothing but pure, wholesome and useful ingredients.
"JUAN H. WRIGHT, M. D., Analytical Chemist, formerly Wright & Merrill, St. Louis."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, and at the State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic and universal indorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists and boards of health over all the world.

M. in the first Presbyterian church of Tualatin Plains, and was opened with a sermon by Rev. F. P. Berry, of Salem, from Romans, 6, 14: "We are not under the law but under peace." After which the constituting prayer was offered by the moderator, Rev. J. V. Milligan. Rev. J. H. Condit acted as states clerk. Following members were in attendance:

Pleasant Grove, Rev. R. A. Criswell.
Calvary, Portland, Rev. E. T. Lee, Elder C. C. Strong.
Beaver Creek, Rev. D. W. James, Elder Elias T. Edwards.
East Portland, Elder James Ingle.

Elder E. C. Holden was elected temporary clerk.

Committee on arrangements presented their report which was adopted, after which the Presbytery listened to the reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting.

The following brethren were received to the fellowship of this Presbytery upon presentation of usual letters: Eugene S. Williard, from the Presbytery of Shenango, Pa.

FIRST DAY.

Rev. E. T. Lee, from Presbytery of Long Island, N. Y., and Rev. R. A. Criswell, from Presbytery of Bloomington, Ill., were received as members on presentation of credentials.

Rev. D. Cardy, of the Presbytery of Nebraska, and Rev. S. Pettigrew, of St. Louis, Mo., were invited to sit as corresponding members.

The moderator appointed the usual standing committees.

The application of Salem church, for aid from the board of H. M., was received and referred to the executive committee at 6 P. M. Presbytery adjourned to meet at 8:30 A. M. Tuesday.

SECOND DAY.

Presbytery met at 8:30 A. M., and engaged in a half hour's devotional exercise, led by Rev. Samuel Pettigrew, after which the moderator took the chair and business was resumed.

Rev. D. O. Gormley, of the Presbytery of Bellefontaine, Ohio, and Rev. A. G. Boyd, of the Presbytery of Dunedin, New Zealand, were invited to sit as corresponding members.

An application for aid from the board of Home Missions on behalf of the churches of Brownsville and Hopewell, was read and referred to executive committee.

Rev. J. H. Condit read the narrative by the committee to the general assembly of 1882 from the Presbytery of Oregon.

The report of the committee was accepted and their action endorsed.

An application for aid from board of Home Missions from Corvallis church, was read and referred to executive committee.

Rev. A. Simpson extended an invitation from Calvary church, of Independence, for the presbytery to meet in that place next spring. The invitation was accepted.

Dr. Lindsley reported the organization of the First Presbyterian church at East Portland, by Rev. D. O. Gormley, on Sept. 17, 1882, and further stated that Mr. W. S. Ladd, of Portland, had donated a lot and promised to pay the expense of a church building.

On motion the First Presbyterian church of East Portland was received into this presbytery.

At 11 A. M., according to previous arrangement, Rev. E. Trumbull Lee, of the Calvary church of Portland, preached a sermon from Ephesians, i., 22-23: "And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."

After the sermon presbytery adjourned till 1 P. M., and in the meantime partook of a most bountiful repast, prepared and served in the church by the ladies of Tualatin Plains.

At 1 P. M. presbytery resumed business.

Rev. David W. James, from presbytery of Fort Dodge, Ia., was, on presentation of credentials, received to the fellowship of the Oregon presbytery.

A communication from W. K. Tully of Jacksonville, Fla., was read and referred to committee on bills and overtures. Also from Presbyterian historical society of Philadelphia. Similarly referred.

On motion of Rev. R. W. Hill a committee was appointed to consider and report at this session the question of revising our rules and regulations; the appointment of new committees; the remodeling of the committees which already exist, and to make such changes as may to them seem wise and necessary.

The moderator appointed Rev. R. W. Hill, Rev. F. P. Berry and Elder C. C. Strong as such committee.

Treasurer Rev. J. H. Condit read his report, which was accepted.

The report of the executive committee, previously presented, was taken from the table and a motion was adopted that this Presbytery overtures the Synod of the Columbia to constitute a Presbytery in Alaska if the way be clear.

That portion of the executive committee's report referring to the subject of temperance was adopted.

Rev. Dr. Lindsley, Rev. G. Ross and Elder C. C. Strong were appointed by the moderator as a committee to prepare and adopt a pastoral letter to the churches and have so many printed as they may deem necessary.

On motion the treasurer was authorized to pay the expense of printing the same.

Presbytery adjourned at 5:30 P. M. to meet on Thursday at 8 A. M.

THIRD DAY.

Presbytery met pursuant to adjournment and engaged in a half hour's devotional exercise, led by Rev. D. O. Gormley, after which Presbytery was called to order and convened as a judicial court.

At 11:30 A. M. the Presbytery was adjourned to meet again at Synod in Portland.

THE LAW OF COURTSHIP.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania Racks its Venerable Brains Over the Question.

New York Herald.

The august tribunal commonly known as the supreme court of Pennsylvania, has lately expounded, in an elaborate opinion, the law governing courtship. The opinion was rendered in a criminal case which turned on the question whether a valid marriage engagement had been made between the fair complainant and the faithless defendant. This point was left to be determined by circumstantial evidence afforded by the incidents of the courtship. The trial judge ruled that in order to establish a promise of marriage it was not necessary to show "the making of presents, writing of love-letters and all of such things that pass between young people." "We have long passed that day," he said, "so far as courtship is concerned. One man may desire to court the girl he wants to make his wife in a secluded place, or he may desire to keep it quiet; another may be in the habit of keeping company with a young lady and appear upon the public highway from time to time, so that all may see him. Hence there is no standard: each case must stand on its four legs as the party build it up."

The supreme court thinks that this is altogether too lax a view of the legal essentials of a proper courtship. It viewed with surprise, not unmingled with indignation, the fact that the jury had found that a promise of marriage had been made when it appeared that the alleged wooer had been in the house of the wooed one only four times, but had "met her out in the evenings, sometimes at church, walked home with her and left her at the gate." The court then proceeds to define the true legal standard of such a courtship as will warrant the inference of a matrimonial engagement. "Circumstantial evidence of an engagement of marriage," it says, "is to be found in the proof of such facts as usually accompany that relation. Among them may be mentioned letters, presents, social attentions of various kinds, visiting together in company, preparations for housekeeping, and the like. These and similar circumstances, especially when the attentions are exclusive and continued a long time, may well justify a jury in finding a promise of marriage. But the court below ignored all these matters as being no longer essential, or rather as belonging to a past age, and virtually instructed the jury that attentions paid to a woman in a 'secluded place' are quite as satisfactory evidence of such promise. We cannot assent to this proposition."

In a staid community, where the courtship is protracted through extended periods—not unfrequently from ten to fifteen years—and where the wooing proceeds with marked regularity, propriety and all the recognized conventionalities, this may be very satisfactory law. But how will it work in the case of those unromantic, go-ahead spirits, who contract their matrimonial alliances on principles of business rather than sentiment, and often on such short notice as puts love-letters, "visiting together in company, preparations for housekeeping and the like" out of the question.

THURSDAY EVENING, Oct. 5.

Almost constant interruption of telegraphic communication for the past week, by reason of prostration of the wires south of Roseburg, leaves this market without knowledge of the wheat market abroad. Walla Walla is steady at $1 47½.

The freight market is unchanged. We have heard of but one charter during the week—the American ship J. W. Marr, wooden, 1296 tons, to U. K. or continent, at 52s 6d.

DR. PERRY PRATT

The great American Herb Phenomenon. Men, women and children, if you are suffering go and see him.

HERBALISM

Is the oldest and grandest system of medical treatment in the world. It is the application of nature's simplest remedies for the removal of disorders set on by artificial life. It came in with Adam, and will go out with the last man. "And the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof shall be for medicine."—Ezekiel 47th chapter 12th verse. When universally practised in this and other countries there was small loss of life and men lived as a rule their allotted time and even far beyond. Mercury and the lancet causes more deaths in quiet sick beds than the sword and cannon on the field of battle. Reaction is taking place and common sense is asserting itself in the minds and conduct of the people, and the clever and accomplished herbalist becomes again the doctor for the million.

Asthma, Catarrh and Lung troubles cured by Dr. Perry Pratt astonished the best doctors in London and Paris, and yet he uses nothing but simple herbs. There is a disease which produces pains about the body that thousands of people treat for Rheumatism but are never cured. The pains occur about any part of the body, but are most apt to occur in one of the hip joints passing down the sciatic nerve; it is often called Sciatic Rheumatism. This disease affects the heart and the entire nerve system, and is wasting and debilitating to the entire body. There is an absolute cure for this disease and those who may suffer in this respect will be informed of the cause of it and of its presence by an examination by Dr. Pratt, who on an examination of the action of the heart will point out the disease without asking a question.

THE ALBINA HOMESTEAD, of which the above is a complete plat, is situated next to Albina, and between and fronting on both the extension of Fourth street, East Portland, and the Vancouver road. All the lots in Blocks 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30 are 50x120 feet, with twenty-foot alleys through the blocks. All the other lots are 50x100 feet. The streets are wide and have all been cleared, while the lots are high and level and can be very easily cleared.

We now offer for sale for a short time a limited number of these Lots and Blocks at reasonable prices and on easy terms.

THE ALBINA HOMESTEAD is unquestionably the best field for investment and the most desirable place for location now in the market. Its close proximity to the cities of Portland and East Portland, and to the heavy improvements now being carried out by the various companies under the direction of Mr. Villard—the Dry Docks, Elevators, Machine Shops and other works of these companies—its nearness also to the Albina Ferry, together with the proposed Street Railway from L Street Ferry, in East Portland, will make this property very accessible from all parts of these cities. These advantages will necessarily attract a large population, and in the meantime make this the most popular and valuable suburban property in this vicinity, while in the near future it must furnish homes for the rapidly increasing population of Albina, and then its value will be at least five times what we now offer it for. We will show the property and give full information to all who may apply to us personally, and inquiries addressed to us by mail will receive prompt attention.

SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 7, 1882

APPOINTMENT IN DEFAULT OF ELECTION.

If there is any serious talk in any quarter of holding the dead-lock to the end of the session and of adjourning the legislature without an election, it may arise in part from the impression that the governor may in such case make an appointment. But it is by no means certain that an appointment made under these conditions would be recognized by the senate. The question has indeed been decided both ways by that body; but the current of the decisions has been for many years mainly, if not wholly, against the admission of senators so appointed.

Benton, in his Thirty Years, devotes a chapter to the subject. He considers it historically, basing his examination on the discussion which arose in 1825 on the case of Mr. Lanman, of Connecticut. Lanman had served a regular term as senator from that state. His term of service had expired on the 3d of March of that year, and the general assembly of that state having failed to make an election of senator in his place, he received a temporary appointment. On presenting himself to take the oath of office on the 4th day of March, being the first day of the special senatorial session convoked by the president, his appointment was objected to as not having been made in a case in which a governor of a state could fill a vacancy by making a temporary appointment. Mr. Tazewell, the distinguished senator from Virginia, was the principal speaker against the validity of the appointment, urging against it both on the words of the constitution and the reason for the provision. The words of the constitution are: "If vacancies happen (in the senate) by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments, until the next meeting of the legislature." "Happen" was held by Mr. Tazewell to be the governing word in this provision, and it always implied a contingency and an unexpected one. It could not apply to a foreseen event, bound to occur at a fixed period. Here the vacancy was foreseen; there was no contingency in it. It was regular and certain. It was the right of the legislature to fill it, and if they failed, no matter from what cause, there was no right in the governor to supply the omission. The reason in the phraseology was evident. The assembly was the appointing body. It was the regular authority to elect senators. It was a body of more or less members, but always representing the whole body of the state and every county in the state, and on that account vested by the constitution with the power of appointing senators. The terms "choose" and "elect" are the words applied to the legislative election of senators. The term "appoint" is the word applied to a gubernatorial appointment. The election was the regular mode of the constitution, and was not to be superseded by an appointment in any case in which the legislature could act, whether they acted or not.

This, it will be seen, is a very close and strong argument. Precedents were adduced in reply. It was shown that William Cooke of Tennessee, appointed by the governor of that state in 1797 to fill the vacancy occasioned by the expiration of his own term, had been admitted, and under like conditions Uriah Tracy of Connecticut had been admitted in 1801, Joseph Anderson of Tennessee in 1809 and John Williams of Tennessee in 1817. In none of these cases except that of Mr. Tracy had any question been raised, and he had been admitted by a vote of 18 to 10. But these precedents were not satisfactory to the senate, and after a debate of several days Mr. Lanman was rejected. "To this decision," adds Mr. Benton, "the subsequent practice of the senate has conformed, leaving states in part or in whole unrepresented, when the legislature failed to elect at proper time."

So the ruling stood down to the close of Benton's day. Since then a case has been decided which is cited as a reversal of the practice maintained since 1825. But the conditions of this case—an appointment from New Hampshire—were not exactly in accord with those of the cases cited above. However, a minority report of the committee charged with the duty of examining the whole subject, which report, if we remember correctly, virtually affirmed the principle in dispute, was adopted by the senate. With precedents on both sides, the question is still perhaps to be regarded as an open one, to be decided in particular cases in this way or that, according to the temper of the senate or the state of parties in it.

The contingency of an appointment and of the admission of the claimant in case an appointment should be made, is too remote for discussion and not profitable for speculation. It may be proper to say, however, that in any event the grounds of the present differences which are preventing the election of a senator, are going to be contested till it be decided whether "bossism" in its most odious form is to rule the republican party or not. It need not be hard to guess which way this question will be decided.

PROTECTION OF FORESTS.

We have heretofore briefly noticed an article on "The Protection of Forests," contributed to the October number of the North American Review by Prof. Chas. S. Sargent. We recur to it because of the importance of the subject to almost every section of the country, and particularly to our own. We ought to look after the matter before we lose our timber, instead of failing to profit by the experience of others who have regretted the unnecessary destruction of their timber after it had disappeared.

"Fire," says Prof. Sargent, "is the greatest enemy to the American forest; next to fire, the browsing animal inflicts upon it the greatest damage, and the American people, in generally using their woodland for pasturage, have adopted the surest method to encompass the final destruction of their forests." He does not recommend the passage of federal laws, but urges legislation by the states. First, he proposes the enactment and enforcement of severe penalties against lumberman who leave the tops and branches of felled trees to dry like tinder in the sun and become the first fuel for forest fires like that which has devastated so large a part of Michigan. Next he proposes to limit by "fencing laws"—such as some states already have—the browsing of vagrant cattle, and finally the establishment in proper places of government "forest reserves."

It is not true, Prof. Sargent insists, that forests have an important influence on the rainfall, as is commonly imagined, and as has been believed ever since Mahomet's time; it is only true that the rainfall has a determining influence upon the growth of forests. The treeless and rainless belts of the United States are not rainless because they are treeless; they are treeless because they are rainless. The "timber culture act" of congress, of which Prof. Sargent urges the repeal, seems to have proceeded upon the assumption that the climatic conditions of the country might be modified for the better by plantations, and the result of this act, he declares, has simply been to encourage great frauds and to transfer millions of acres of public lands to people who had rendered no public service as an equivalent for them. It is worthless as a stimulus to the cultivation of forests, and it encourages the planting of trees where the trees cannot grow unless artificially irrigated, and thus entails losses upon honest settlers deceived into the belief that the government would not encourage impracticable and useless planting. He believes that the real service a forest renders in regard to rain is to act as a distributing [illegible] reservoir for it. "It seems to be [illegible] pression of the gardener [illegible] earth's surface. It prevents the wa[illegible] has fallen from flowing away [illegible] the surface of the ground; it protects springs; it delays the melting of snows; it checks evaporation; it equalizes temperature; it breaks the force of destructive winds; it holds the soil on the sides of steep mountain declivities, and prevents it from washing into the valleys below; and finally, it tends to keep a regular and equable flow of water in the rivers, and prevents them from drying into rills at one season and overflowing in destructive floods at another.

But obtainment of timber is the only object of the lumberman, and to get rid of timber in his clearing is the struggle of the settler, and by both much is needlessly destroyed. In any mountainous country, where the timber is cut away, the rainfall, if it be heavy, soon carries off the soil, and many parts of the old world, once very fertile, have thus become unproductive and almost uninhabitable. Destruction of the timber in the western sections of Oregon and Washington, where the rainfall is so great, would undoubtedly in the course of time cause much of the soil to be carried into the streams or to the sea. This is an invariable consequence under conditions like those which prevail here, and it is far worse than any inconvenience or injury resulting from immediate loss of the forests.

INCREASE OF INSANITY.

The opinion of specialists in regard to the prevalence of the particular ailment or disease to which they respectively devote themselves is to be taken with a degree of reserve. In the nature of the case their attention is constantly being called to new cases, and as they grow older and better recognized in their specialty the cases increase greatly in number. Nor are statistics to be trusted implicitly. For, aside from the liberal twist which a good statistician can easily give an array of figures in order to make it more exact, according to his notion, there is the more important element that the later statistics may have been more carefully collected, and therefore more exact. In the matter of insanity there is the added difficulty of drawing the line at the point where mental instability, want of balance or eccentricity pass over into melancholia, dementia or positive insanity.

Still, all the experts seem to agree with the conclusions derivable from statistics that insanity is considerably increasing. It is most prevalent in the oldest communities. It is more prevalent in Europe than in this country; more prevalent in the east than here. One form of it, paresis, or softening of the brains although quite common on the seaboard, is unknown here. According to the English statistics, in 1860 there were 19.10 insane persons out of every 10,000 of the population. In 1870 it had risen to 24.56, and in 1880 to 27.94.

In a comparatively new country like this there is relatively much less insanity from hereditary taint, a fact due to the general vigor of the generations immediately preceding. There are everywhere, however, very many people whose minds are not in a perfectly stable condition. When the world goes smoothly they are as sane as anybody; but when trouble overtakes them, or any violent shock, they lose their balance and become insane. In this connection the fast and overworked life led by so many business and professional men is greatly to be deplored. It reduces the vital force below the safe point of recuperation. As a result of it the community loses annually the services of members who, in the ordinary course of things, should be in their prime.

The principal curative means relied upon in this class of maladies are tonics, exercise, nourishment and plenty of pure air. It is pleasant to be told by no less authority than that of Dr. A. E. Macdonald, superintendent of Ward's Island, that if cases are taken in hand within three months after the disease appears three out of five get well. If there is a delay of six months before commencing treatment not more than half get well. If a year is suffered to elapse hardly 2 per cent. recover. Those recovering are liable to occasional returns of the disease, but speedy treatment will generally restore the patient.

Some men are born innocent, some achieve innocence and some have innocence thrust upon them. From his protestations before the bribery committee it would appear that all these conditions were united in the case of the virtuous boss at Salem. Such innocence, in one who as a professional politician desperately seeking his own advancement, has for years been accustomed to "dodge and palter in the shifts of lowness," is too tender and confiding for this cold and unfeeling world. It will "get left."

Major Bruce, a Washington county representative, is credited with a good thing. He is reported to have said that he thought it hardly necessary to pursue the bribery investigation through a special committee, since a good deal more could be learned by holding a class-meeting composed of all the members who had been voting against Mitchell, and asking each one to relate his "experience."

The British postoffice department has unearthed a half million dollar steal something like a feeble imitation of our own star route robbers. Let the patriots take heart from this. America is not the only nation that supports treasury raiders.

The New York Times says pointedly that enough has been proven against J. H. Mitchell "to render it certain that he should remain in private life."

Leaf by leaf the roses fall. So do the boss' votes fail him.

A Predicted Revolution.

The North American Review contains an article from the pen of an English writer named H. M. Hyndman, in which he predicts a revolution in England before the close of the present century. As the people become educated they have a better knowledge of the causes operating to keep them poor, and grow restless with their condition. The points made by Mr. Hyndman, as we find them summarized, are to the following effect:

In no civilized country is there such a monopoly of the land as in Great Britain; so much capital, machinery and credit in the hands of a class; such a complete social separation between classes; so striking a contrast between the excessive wealth of the few and the grinding poverty of the many; nowhere else is the machinery of government so entirely in the hands of the non-producing classes, or the people so dependent for their necessary food on sources of supply thousands of miles away; in no country is it so difficult for a man to rise out of the wage-earning classes, or is justice so dear or its administration so completely in the hands of the governing classes who make the laws.

A National Reputation.

Boston Post, Sept. 25.

Hipple-Mitchell's tally in the race for the Oregon senatorship was 40 votes when the legislature adjourned on Saturday. Balloting will be renewed this morning and if Mitchell can get six more votes he will succeed Lafayette Grover in the senate of the United States. Three democrats have already deserted their party candidates and given their vote for Mitchell, but it is believed the remaining 3-, as well as the handful of anti-Mitchell republicans, will stand firm to the last, in opposition to the most disreputable politician whom Oregon has ever lifted into prominence.

Will Never be Elected.

Albany Democrat.

The man who for weeks past has been holding his forces together by promises of money and the spoils of office, is a fit representative of the political bosses of to-day. But the popular will will eventually overcome his men and his methods, and the indications are at this writing that Mitchell will never be elected to the United States senate by an Oregon legislature.

Enforced Economy.

San Francisco Wasp.

"My dear," said Gov. Stanford, laying down his morning newspaper and [illegible] his [illegible] breakfast egg, "both political parties are nominating high priced men; we shall have to economize."

"I don't see how we can keep house on much less," was the thoughtful reply. "Can't we sell Pix[illegible]"

MEETING NOTICES.

Calvary Presbyterian Church, corner Eleventh and Main streets. The morning services at 11 o'clock will be conducted by the Rev. J. H. Condit of Albany. Sunday school at 12:30 o'clock. The evening meeting, commencing at 7:30 o'clock, will be upon the subject of Home Missions. The following persons will take part: Rev. E. C. Berry, of Salem, subject: "Our Extended Field"; Rev. J. R. Thompson of Olympia, "The Power [illegible]"; Rev. G. R. Bird of Seattle, "Woman's [illegible]"; Rev. Alexander Adair of Dayton, [illegible] "The Old West and the New West." [illegible] and reports from ladies who [illegible] cordial [illegible] extended to all to attend. [illegible]

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Special Dispatch to the Oregonian.

Salem, Oct. 6—9 P. M.—Mitchell lost one vote to-day, so that [illegible] of the original thirty-six votes [illegible] republicans [illegible] his [illegible] for J. N. Dolph. It is understood that he changed because he has become convinced that Mitchell was not the choice of the party. This leaves Mitchell's strength, counting Dunbar, who is absent, [illegible] votes, three short of his highest point and lacking seven of enough to elect. To-day's ballot marks another step in the decline which must continue from day to day, till only a crowd of personal followers and [illegible] will remain. The boss [illegible] has lost hope and is using every possible argument and influence to deter the wavering from [illegible] disheartened, but [illegible] avail. Everybody but himself admits his candidacy to be hopeless.

The investigating committee to-day reported the testimony in the Waters' bribery case without conclusions. Macquam has resigned and Jamison is now in his place and the committee has reorganized with Jamison, democratic member, as chairman. He is a fair man, wholly free from partisan feeling or interest in the matter, and is disposed to push the investigation. It is understood that two or more new cases will come before the committee to-morrow.

There is much talk as to the course the governor will take in the event of no election. It is an open question whether he has authority to fill a vacancy occurring through the failure of the legislature to elect, but the general opinion is that he should appoint a senator and leave the matter of his qualification for the senate to determine. Mitchell's strikers claim that he will appoint their boss and opposing parties are equally positive that he will not. It is safe to say that all talk of this sort is idle and that nobody knows anything about it. It is not likely, however, that Governor Moody would appoint any man who having been a candidate before the legislature failed of election.

The session will probably close two weeks from to-day. Business is well along and is suffering no delay by the present aspect of the senatorial fight.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR.

This Grand Exhibition still the Center of Attraction—To-Night's Display Concludes this Brilliant Entertainment.

The pavilion still continues the center of attraction for those who are delighted with a taste and an appreciation for the beautiful and the curious, the wonderful and the grand. The multitude of creations [illegible] the dimness of being scarcely perceptible, notwithstanding the fact that this is the close of the third week since its opening. The success of no previous exhibit is comparable with that realized by the display of this season. The management have well succeeded in accomplishing the purpose for which they opened a deal of [illegible] the pavilion, a resort of interest, instruction and entertainment, and merit great credit from all sources. To-night's display concludes the exhibition, and it is safe to assume that the attendance will be immense. All who properly appreciate the developments of science and invention should certainly avail themselves of the pleasure of attending the last evening's entertainment.

[illegible]

For the past quarter of a century the leading furniture dealers and manufacturers of the northwest [illegible] their efforts at former fairs in the great display they make in the gallery. Their exhibit has each year been a leading feature in the display, and to their energy and enterprise in the matter this year much credit is due. While other dealers have made a blustering show of lack of time, etc., to exhibit, G. Shindler & Co., though far behind in their orders and driven to the full limit of their large force during business hours, have spared neither pains nor expense in their contribution to the success of the exhibition. The public can readily see that selfishness and negligence upon the part of business men, if universal, would deprive us of the Mechanics' Fair entirely, and will commend accordingly the enterprise that this firm has shown. We find in the northwestern part of the gallery a space of 50x16 feet divided into three rooms, each filled up with home-like comfort and regal elegance. In the first is an ash set of bedroom furniture made entirely of Oregon wood by Oregon labor. The work is a faithful copy of expensive imported furniture. The body of this furniture is of solid ash, the panels and trimmings of ash burl. The washstand is of new style, being surmounted by a beveled edge French plate glass mirror. A crimson carpet of body Brussels, delicately outlined in black sprays adds to and brings out the beauty of the highly polished furniture. We note also [illegible] furniture, solid and elegant, upholstered in leather, brown and hunter's green. An elegant sideboard in ash, with Lepanto marble top, in a style entirely new and much more convenient than the old, completes the furniture of this room. In the central room we find the most magnificent bedroom set ever shown in this city. It is a solid walnut, heavily and artistically carved and highly polished. Tennessee marble is used for the top of the bureau and washstand and heavy French plate glass, beveled edge for the mirrors. The trimmings are of French walnut burl. A chiffoniere of walnut, elaborately carved, polished and finished, is a stately and elegant piece. An unique and attractive piece is a "conversational chair," upholstered in silk cotelaine with six plush trimmings, intended for the center of a parlor, and delightful for a tete-a-tete. The walls of this room are hung with

"HIGH ART" WALL PAPER,

The center and corner decorations in the ceiling and the frieze being extremely handsome. The semblance of a room is preserved, even to the window hung with curtains of antique lace, the chandeliers depending from the center piece and the pictures upon the walls. A carpet of Axminster moquette completes the picture. We pass on to the parlor. Here are five pieces, with frames of ebony and gold richly upholstered in crimson satin damask. Each piece is a miracle of the upholsterer's art. A portiere is hung with curtains of raw silk and plush upon an ebony and gilt cornice pole. Articles of bric-a-brac, plants on ebony stands and chandeliers make truly a home-like picture, with a rare combination of elegance, taste and comfort. The walls are hung with richest embossed gilt paper, with elegant frieze and ceiling decorations. All the mirrors shown are heavy French plate glass with beveled edges, and are set in style entirely new. One of the most strikingly elegant pieces shown is an ebony cabinet delicately ornamented in gold with plush back and panels of beveled French plate glass. So real is the home picture presented in this room by the plants, the dainty articles tastefully arranged, the massive marble mantle and cosy grate that the visitor half expects a smiling mistress to rise and bid him welcome. A pretty and dainty novelty is shown in a gilt reception chair. To show the latest style in floor decorations the margin of this floor is painted and in the center and reaching to the painted edge is a magnificent Persian rug. Any description of this exhibit does it but feeble justice. To fully appreciate it the warm colors, delicate tints, high polish and tasteful arrangement must be seen. The chandeliers with which each room of the exhibit is furnished are from the establishment of Foster & Robertson, and the slate mantle in ebony, etc., shown in the parlor is from A. Goodnough & Co. With these exceptions the articles herein briefly enumerated are from the large establishment of G. Shindler & Co., on First and Front streets, between Morrison and Yamhill. While the stock shown is eminently representative furniture of this reliable and well known establishment it gives but a slight idea of the variety that crowds their large warerooms through an entire block, upstairs and down. The energy that prompted this firm to make this handsome and costly exhibit at the Mechanics' Fair is of the same character that keeps them always in the front rank in their business. Regardless of the fact that competing houses in the city would share with them in the business profits directly brought about by their pavilion display, they persevered in making it an exhibit that is a credit to the Portland Mechanic's Fair, to the work of Oregon mechanics and to their own industry and enterprise. They do not belong to the class who have "no time" to aid public enterprises, nor to those who are content to reap what others plant. These facts briefly stated sound the key-note to the success of G. Shindler & Co., the leading furniture dealers of Portland.

JOHN S. FURRY,

Who we have before spoken of as exhibiting a very excellent piece of work in the shape of a light, or express wagon, deserves more than a passing notice. He has made a very important improvement in what is called the fifth wheel or circle of a wagon or carriage. All interested in this should examine it. His display is made in the west end of the extension gallery where he will be found ready to give all needed information and explain the merits of his improvement. If any one will examine his work closely they will find that the material used is of the very best. The springs, particularly, are very fine. The wood work cannot be excelled in point of neatness and beauty of trimming. Mr. Furry would have been able to have made a still better exhibit of his superior work had he been able to finish other articles intended for the fair before it was too late to enter them. However, his display is very creditable and deserves the highest recommendation. His manufactory is located at 144 Third street, between Alder and Morrison, where all orders will receive prompt attention and all work will be executed in first class style at lowest prices.

C. M. MYERS' FLORAL DISPLAY.

Every one who has visited the pavilion this year, must have noticed the rare taste displayed in its decorations. This work was done entirely by Mr. C. M. Myers, the florist and landscape gardener, whose grounds are located at Eleventh and Market streets. His display of rare plants and flowers and the excellent and artistic taste displayed in their arrangement, proves him to be a real master of his calling. We have not space to enumerate the many beautiful specimens of horticultural art displayed by him, but can only say that those who wish to see something beautiful in that line, should examine his exhibit.

BILLIARD TABLES AT THE FAIR.

All lovers of billiards who have examined Chas. Louis Kuhn's exhibit at the pavilion pronounced his tables far superior to any in this market. He is agent for the celebrated Delaney patent steel spring cushions, which are now taking the lead over all others manufactured. The elegant mechanical skill displayed in the finish of the table on exhibit shows him to be an adept in this line of work. He was extremely anxious to enter for competition, but other billiard table firms feared to do so, consequently he only exhibits in order to show the public the great superiority of his tables and cushions.

NEW MARKET THEATER.

Another good house last night attested the chord of popular favor struck by the "Magic Doll." Miss Bessie King was somewhat hoarse, but warmed out of it after the first act, and sang her numbers with a great deal of vivacity. Calhoun was excruciatingly funny, and was called before the curtain till the poor fellow was fairly tired out. Amsden's singing was an improvement upon his former efforts, and he sang very sweetly. Calhoun's descent into the orchestra was also a laughable contretemps, and fairly brought down the house. The piece will be given for a matinee this afternoon, and this evening for the last time. Don't fail to see it. The company leave for a tour of the valley Monday.

NINETEEN NEW LAWYERS.

LADIES' SECRETS.

Latest Style in Hose—How Perfumed Powder is Worn on Garters.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"It makes not the slightest difference what envious rival cities have to say of St. Louis girls' feet," exclaimed a merchant this morning. "No sort of opinion can alter their size. Stockings have come to be of so much importance since the women skirt their skirts that twice the money is spent in hose."

"What quality is preferred?"

"Silk, where they can afford it. It is no uncommon thing for a fashionable young lady to buy $25 worth at a time. The demand now is for black. We can't get enough of them. Some days I dread to see a woman approach my counter, for I know that there isn't a black stocking on the shelves, and those sent out to be dyed aren't done."

"So you resort to dyes to meet the fashion?"

"We are obliged to."

"Do your customers suspect it?"

"No. But where the goods have been dyed it has an added stiffness. If the stocking is elastic you may know it was woven in the color represented."

"What is the popular number?"

"The 8½ size. A good many buy No. 8, but I know it is too small for them."

"How?"

"I size 'em up by the bust, waist, arm and hand. If I should give them a larger number than they ask for they mutter 'stupid' or look amazed. They are dreadfully touchy about their sizes."

"What is the length of limbs?"

"From twenty-seven to twenty-eight inches. You see that brings it well up over the knee, and then a hose suspender is hooked on, and they are in a trim harness."

"I thought garters were used?"

"So they are, but for ornament only. They've taken off all that ribbon and lace business, and use only a buckle, ranging in price according to their means. You'll never guess what they wear attached to the under side of the buckle."

"A face-powder rag?"

"No; a scent-bag."

"Phew!"

"That's what you'd say if you picked up one of them after it's filled with the owner's favorite perfume. Sachet powder, you know."

"Do you mean to say that you can tell where the odor is applied, whether on the handkerchief or at the knee?"

"Go 'long! It's as easy as whistling. If the scent strikes you horizontally it's sure to be on the handkerchief and comes like a broadside of smoke."

"Well, and the—"

"The—the other. Why, that takes a person of delicate sensibilities to understand. It gives you a sort of Black Crook emotion. By degrees you become aware of a faint odor, which seems to lift from the floor as if a whole rosebud had just been crushed by the lady's foot."

"Does it materialize?"

"You've struck it. I can see the entire stocking supply dancing about as if filled with—well, patent the forms."

"Young man, you should acquire a cold."

"You'd think it likely if you'd inspect our shivering blues. See!"

The salesman opened a box and spread on the counter a variety of blue hose, ranging from the gray telegraph hue through the military, Fra Angelica and saphire shades. They were either solid color clocked with five clocks, perfectly plain or ridged perpendicularly with Richelieu ribs, narrow, wide or broken.

"They do suggest a spiritual atmosphere."

"And see their opposites—veritably the hues of the damned. Terra cotta? Nothing but a brick-dust red. And here's its deeper shade, 'saucepan.' That ought to be intelligible to a girl who knows anything about the kitchen. Then there's opera red, scarlet, crimson and cardinal."

"Is embroidery passe?"

"Yes, but these colors and the new shades of bottle-green, plum and bronze have ankle patterns woven in with old gold thread to produce the same effect."

"No more lightning effects?"

"Yes, indeed. We keep stock to suit all legs. Roman stripes, open work fronts and ombre rings enough to make your head swim."

"What is the popular make?"

"The French goods or its German imitation, because the pointed toe they make is best suited to fit the new style of boot."

This remark directed the reporter to the shoe counter.

"What is your latest in heels—dizzy effects?"

"Just so," replied St. Crispin's Knight; "we have two styles this fall—the Louis Quinze heel and the plain French affair. They have both attached themselves to the Dieppe tie, which is the slipper for all society and boudoir events of any importance. It may be had in black kid or any desired shade of satin. The toe is not changed from the familiar shape, but the heel reaches up to and half way around the ankle, where on either side in a button hole is fastened three-eighths of a yard of two and one-half inch ribbon, black or colored. These are tied in bet loops drawn out nearly equal with the ends."

"That's satisfactory. Do you think they'll take?"

"They've taken. I sell dozens daily. The women think they are rapturously lovely."

"And boots?"

"The pointed or London toe with patent leather tip is the daisy. It has a short vamp and makes the foot look shorter than any style of shoe we ever handled."

"How are they fastened?"

"Half laced and hooked up the front. Buttons are going out with a rush."

"How high is the heel?"

"From one and a quarter to one and three-eighths inches. This style accentuates the arch of the instep just enough to be pretty and comfortable. We have the same with cork soles for midwinter. But few want them, however, because they make the foot look larger, and as the average foot is a No. 3, this objection has some reason in it."

ODDS AND ENDS.

A public-spirited lady friend refrains from wearing corsets because she is opposed to anything that interferes with the liberty of the press.

Nursery note: It is with some mothers in the treatment of their children as with fireworks. First the rock it and then the stick.—Boston Transcript.

A mother who fondly put the query to her young son, "What would you do without a mother, Tom?" was dumbfounded with the reply, "Do as I like, ma."

A Canadian girl has sued a clergyman for damages for kissing her five times. This rather insipid amount of osculation extended over a period of three years.

"I believe in moderation in all things," said the red-nosed man. "I drink myself sometimes." "Great Heavens," exclaimed Fogg, "and you call that moderation!"

Boy, to a lady visitor: "Teacher, there's a girl over there a winkin' at me." Teacher: "Well, then, don't look at her." Boy: "But if I don't look at her he'll wink at somebody else."

Said the Texas sheriff as he was about to spring the trap: "Kick and squirm as much as you can. There are about four thousand people present, and we want them to have all the fun possible."

"Me, I have no time to read the papers," remarked Fogg's wife; "I simply skim them and let them go at that." "Ever skim milk," replied Fogg. "Very fast; you know."

If you have a fight with a fellow about a girl, make it a point to get whipped and badly hurt. Girls are sympathetic creatures, and she's bound to pity you and think the other fellow a horrid brute.

Old gentleman (looking at a very bob-tailed horse): "Bless me, how short they have cut his tail." Attendant: "His master is a member of the society for the protection of animals, sir. In this fashion he will annoy the poor flies."

A Chicago minister makes a note of the fact that he has never seen a lady reading a newspaper in a street car. Well? He has never seen a lady smoking on a car platform, either, has he? It simply goes to show that a lady is no gentleman.

A domestic is being sent away. "Madame, if you wish to look at my trunk—" "It is useless, girl." "Madame, I insist. Six months ago you lost ten francs. I know you suspect me of having found it, and I wish you to see that I do not carry it away in my trunk!"

Eastern Freight Situation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Although the weather has been fine here, yet there does not appear to be any increase in the freight movement via Cape Horn, but on the contrary, the market continues dull, but not absolutely dull, there being more or less freight offering, but not in sufficiently large lots to make any activity in the market. The A. J. Fuller is in berth still, and the Lucia is not being pushed, owing to a scarcity of tonnage on berth. Rates are much firmer, and although quotations are higher, agents are loth to receipt current quotations. Tonnage is still scarce and prices in fact, there is no tonnage that can be had at current rates are shown as low, indisposed to California in the face of present grain freights, which are reported here as ruling at 52 per ton.

SET BACK 42 YEARS.

"I was troubled for many years with Kidney Complaint, Gravel, etc.; my blood became thin; I was dull and inactive; could hardly crawl about; was an old worn out man all over; could get nothing to help me, until I got Hop Bitters, and now I am a boy again. My blood and kidneys are all right, and I am as active as a man of 30, although I am 72, and I have no doubt it will do as well for others of my age. It is worth a trial.—(Father.)—Sunday Mercury.

If you are a man of business, weakened by the strain of your duties avoid stimulants and use Hop Bitters.

If you are young and suffering from any indiscretion or dissipation; if you are married or single, old or young, suffering from poor health or languish on a bed of sickness, rely on Hop Bitters.

TO THE PUBLIC.

It is generally conceded that the enterprise begun in this city about five years ago, and known as the FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE, has met with a success unparalleled in the mercantile history of this State, and almost prodigious in its nature.

The cause underlying this success is not questioned any longer. It is simply this: The people of Oregon have for so long a time been the victims of grasping and unscrupulous dealers, having for so many years been ground under the heel of an avaricious guild, have at last had their eyes opened to the fact that their dollar, no less than anybody else's, is worth one hundred cents, and ought, by right, purchase as much as if in the hands of the merchant.

To the FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE belongs the credit of having released the people from the oppressive yoke, of having redeemed them from their thralldom, and of having enlightened them upon a point so vital to their prosperity. This vexes those merchants who are unable to keep pace with the march of time, who are loth to accommodate themselves to smaller profits, and who never forget anything because they never learn anything, and they cannot help themselves. They are spotted; the people have put their mark on them, while the FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE has become the household word in every family in the [illegible] is to them synonymous with honesty, integrity and fair dealing.

To take advantage of the fair fame of which the FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE has a right to boast, is a thing from which their competitors do not shrink, as their sense of honor does not deter them from stooping so low; consequently it often occurs that when a party, for the first time in this city, happens to fall in their clutches, he is led to believe, when asking for the FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE, that he is just in the place he is looking for, and every device, chicanery and false representation is used to deceive. This has occurred so often that the undersigned, proprietor of the above mentioned place, finds himself compelled to notify those who have so long subsisted on this disreputable practice, that unless they cease their tactics he will, though reluctantly, seek redress through the legal channel. He has, in accordance with the provisions of the laws of the State, delivered to and had recorded in the office of the Secretary of State, the words "FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE," as a TRADE MARK, to be used as a sole designation to his store. The undersigned does not propose to submit to an infringement upon his rights any longer, nor is he for a moment so philanthropic as to quietly allow others to reap the benefit of his labor, and, above all, suffer his customers to be thus imposed upon. He therefore hereby notifies all persons so using his Trade Mark in the future that he will hold them strictly responsible for the same, and prosecute them to the extent of the law, which provides as follows:

"Any person, partnership, firm or corporation that shall use, or cause to be used, any designation or description, the same as or SIMILAR to one so secured or recorded, [illegible] or profit, shall forfeit to the use of the owner of the name, mark or brand, [illegible] or imitated, one-half of the property, goods or articles of trade upon which the same [illegible] the value thereof, to be recovered by the said owner in any court having jurisdiction [illegible] —Code of Oregon, Sec. 3, Chapter xxxiii, Miscellaneous Laws; page 860.

HORSFORD'S [illegible]

A Sorrowful Romance.

A merchant of Allegheny has in his possession the following note:

APRIL 12.

It will not be possible for me to keep the appointment for this afternoon. I regret it much, but business interferes.

J. W. B.

The note was written by John Wilkes Booth in 1865, two days before Lincoln was assassinated. In April, 1865, the Allegheny merchant went to Baltimore to endeavor to find some traces of his brother, who had gone from Pittsburg as a soldier in the early part of the war. "The second day after my arrival in Baltimore," said the merchant, "I called at the house of Mrs. ——. The family consisted of Mrs. ——, her daughter Estelle, and Robert, a boy about twelve years old. Miss Estelle was between eighteen and twenty years old, and was rather pretty. She was tall and slender, and talked with great spirit. She was very graceful and quick-witted, and sang well. When I told Mrs. —— what my errand was in Baltimore, she expressed a great deal of sympathy for my mother, and insisted upon my occupying the room which belonged to her son, who was in the army.

"Mrs. —— told me that her daughter had formed a fancy for a man who did not care for her and who was an actor. She said that nothing had ever come out of the matter, and she did not think there was anything to fear, but she did not like the man's profession, although she took pains to assure me that he was a gentleman, had always acted in the most honorable way and never seemed to notice that Estelle cared for him, but talked to her about music and the stage and took an interest in her musical studies.

"One morning Miss Estelle and I were at the breakfast table, Mrs. —— having excused herself, as she had some household duties to attend to. The young lady's attention was, evidently, preoccupied about something, for she talked at random and seemed to be thinking. At last she said, with a rather odd expression of face:

"'I expect a friend to call on me this afternoon. I think you will like him. He is very fond of music.'

"I asked who he was, and she looked disturbed at my question, but replied:

"'He is my best friend. He is an actor, and is coming over from Washington.'

"I remembered what her mother had told me, and I changed the topic of conversation. In the afternoon about four o'clock I was sitting in the parlor with Estelle when her brother Bob came in with a letter for her. She blushed when she saw the handwriting on opening the envelope and tore it open hastily. Then her expression changed, and she showed that she was disappointed. She read the note two or three times and then said:

"'It is too bad. He isn't coming. I think he might have written more than that to you.'

"She handed the letter to me, and then went round to the piano, began playing. I absently folded and refolded the note until I had it in a crumpled ball, and when she started to go up stairs to dress for supper, the note could not be found. She was a little vexed at its loss at first, but soon recovered at supper and did not allude to it again. Three days after that I was to go home. I got up early to make arrangements and went out on the street, where I heard of the assassination of Lincoln. I returned. Mrs. —— and Estelle were awaiting my appearance to sit down to breakfast. I was greatly excited and exclaimed as I entered:

"'President Lincoln was murdered in the theater last night!'

"The ladies screamed and looked frightened, and Mrs. —— cried out: 'Oh, God help us all of us who are friends of the South! Who did it?'

"'A cowardly actor named Booth—John Wilkes Booth.'

"The words were scarcely out of my mouth when Estelle gave a scream and fell forward upon the table and from there to the floor, dragging the breakfast dishes about her with a crash. The mother seemed almost as much effected as the daughter, but she loosened Estelle's dress and lifted her up, while I bathed her head with water. I was terribly confused, but I suggested that I should go for a doctor. Mrs. —— at the suggestion almost screamed.

"'No! No! No one must know it!'

"'Know what?' I asked.

"'Why, don't you know? Don't you remember John Wilkes Booth was the man I told you about—the man she is in love with?'

"Then I remembered the note and saw that it was signed 'J. W. B.' Estelle had not mentioned the name, and that was why I did not understand it. Mrs. —— was wild with terror and feared that her daughter might be suspected with having some connection with the plot of Booth and his companions. Estelle was ill and did not leave her room, and I did not see her after that awful morning, poor girl! On my way home I found Booth's note in my pocket, where I must have put it without knowing it after I had crushed it up into a ball. I kept it then as a memento. The business Booth referred to was evidently that of the plot.

"I don't know whether Estelle is living or dead. She was living when I was in Baltimore two years ago. Her mother was dead and Estelle was living near Bowling Green, Va., and not far from Garrett farm, where the man she loved was shot in a barn twelve days after he had murdered the President of the United States."—Pittsburg Telegraph.

President Arthur's Double.

Many persons say that they saw President Arthur at Coney Island on Sunday. He was first observed at the Flatbush avenue gate, where he was greeted by a conductor who met him in Washington many a time. As it was raining very hard the conductor told him to go into the close car, where it was warmer and where he could smoke if he chose. The President thanked his old friend for his kindness and promised him a good place as soon as he returned to Washington. After rattling through the rain for twenty minutes the train with its precious freight, arrived at Coney Island. There the President stepped out of the car and into the hotel, where he was met by his old acquaintance Breslin, who had been already notified of his coming by telegraph. They shook hands cordially, and though Mr. Breslin was rather surprised at such an unexpected meeting and the fact the President was alone, he made no special remark about it and ordered a few bottles of wine to be placed on ice. As soon as the extra dry had time to get properly cooled Mr. Breslin and his guests toasted the health of the Union, its President and all others in authority, in foaming goblets. It is said that after the wine was drank the gentleman who had thus far been taken for the President, revealed the fact that he was none other than the proprietor of a Fulton street shoe shop, who knowing his very close resemblance to President Arthur, thought it might not be out of place on such a rainy day to make a little fun where all seemed so gloomy and cheerless. Meanwhile there is only one word which described the feelings of his entertainer at the Brighton, and that is "Mum."—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Melville Meeting with His Wife—His Side of the Insanity Story.

A correspondent gives the following description of Engineer Melville's reception at his home and his meeting with his wife and children:

The grounds around his cottage, a rather large and handsome one, were unpenetrated by the crowd, and in the doorway three little girls, the tallest in the center, could be seen awaiting their father's first kiss and embrace. When Melville went away, Mela, the youngest, was a babe in arms. Maud, the oldest, now about fourteen years old, is a girl of great promise, and although she was but a child when he left her, she was almost a young lady last night, and received such admiration and attention as few young ladies do. Through the cheering crowds that lined the road Melville came, a march of joy and triumph very different to the weary march over the Siberian wastes, and at the gate all stopped. Melville went in alone, and taking the three in his arms and holding them for awhile to his heart, was led by Maud to where her mother was awaiting her. Then the committees and delegates entered the reception room, and soon Melville came in proudly and joyfully, with his wife leaning upon his arm. In the pleasure of his presence and the occasion, Mrs. Melville made a striking appearance, although the anxiety through which she has passed has worn upon her youthful and very attractive appearance. She was plainly dressed in black, with her dark hair combed in two waves across her forehead, after the old style. She cordially welcomed all her husband's friends, and especially Noros and Nindermann, the two sailors whom he still kept at his side. In the room was a large picture of the Jeannette and various other pictures and china ornaments and trophies that Melville has brought from past cruizes in far-off climes. Standing in the center of the room, with his wife behind him, Melville received about 1500 or 2000 persons.

Mr. Melville says: My wife's insanity has manifested itself occasionally ever since our marriage, but has become more violent of late. I have heard of her drawing a toy-wagon along the streets and asking passers-by to look at the new baby that was to be a surprise to George (that's I) upon his return, when there was not even a rag-doll in the wagon. Still, as her hallucinations were generally harmless, I had no fear of her doing anything violent. I would rather have had nothing said publicly of this sad affair, but since it has got into the newspapers, I want the true facts set forth. One of the members of her family died in an asylum for the insane. Another is a "simple," and a third passed several years in confinement because of insanity. Her story, which I read this morning, was the raving of a demented mind, but, like many insane persons, she possesses the faculty of speaking very sensibly and coherently, even with her mind unbalanced, so that I cannot say that the writer of the article had any intention of doing me harm. His mistake was one of judgment and not of intention. He did not know that he was talking to a crazy woman. Many of my friends know of the troubles I have experienced in my domestic life, but none knew them all.

With regard to the story as to the troubles about money, Chief Engineer Able, an intimate friend, said:

According to the regulations of the navy, an officer at sea can only allow his wife one-half of his salary. This Mr. Melville did, giving her $90 a month. Beside this, he owned the house, which was well furnished, laid in a stock of coal sufficient for three years, paid the taxes and the school expenses of the children for the same term, and paid off the debts she had contracted while he was with the Asiatic squadron. To do this he had to get a special order from the secretary of the treasurery, allowing him to allot his whole salary, except $10 a month, to his wife. On this pitiful sum he had to live a long time.

The Clock Tower at Berne.

In the very center of the city of Berne, Switzerland, stands the noted Clock Tower. When the founder of the city, some 500 years ago, reared this tower it guarded the outer wall. This tower and the curious automatic performances of its clock are among the curiosities of Berne that attract many visitors, and induce nearly all tourists to lay over a day at least. The following curious exhibition takes place whenever the clock strikes, the favorite hour for viewing it being twelve o'clock: At three minutes before the hour a cock crows and flaps his wings, as if calling his associate performers from their slumbers. Presently some bears march in procession around an old man, and the cock flaps his wings and crows again. Then a fool, arrayed in cap and bells, strikes the hour on a bell with a hammer, while the old man checks off the strokes with his scepter, as if counting them, at the same time turning over an hour glass which he holds in his left hand. A bear nods his approval, and a final bout of cock crowing ends the performance.—[Baltimore American.

"Would you make it to order?"

"Certainly."

"I will bear that in mind. But meantime, can you tell me who invented the finger ring?"

"It is older than history. The ancients account for its origin by ascribing to Jupiter a sharp practice, which would be no credit to a Four Courts shyster. They say that, prompted by revenge, he had Prometheus chained to the frosty Caucasus, where a vulture banqueted the live long day on the captive's liver. Jupiter eventually relented, and to avoid breaking his oath, commanded his enemy, when freed, to perpetually wear an iron ring to which was fastened a small piece of Mt. Caucasus, so that in effect he remained bound to the rock. I don't take much stock in that story. The ancients, some of them, were scaly fellows."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

A daughter of Brigham Young, a bride of four months, when asked by a visitor, "How will you regard the taking of another wife by your husband, which, according to your code, is not only his right, but his duty, and which sooner or later you expect him to do?" replied, "Of course it is a painful thought, and I try to put it away from me until the time comes; but I shall accept it as a duty to my husband, and because the church requires it."

Dying Words of the Great.

Dr. Johnson, passing away amid a tumult of uneasiness and fear, said to one who stood close beside his bed, "God bless you, my dear!"

The celebrated Dr. Adams, rector of the high school of Edinburgh, in some moments of delirium preceding his death, whispered, "It is growing dark, boys!" stretching forth his hand, "you may go!"

Queen Elizabeth of England, lying on her royal couch, was heard to moan out the heartrending words as she closed her eyes forever, "All my possessions for one moment of time!"

But the noble Wesley simply exclaimed, in calmness of spirit, "The best of all is, God is with us!"

Poor Robert Burns, out of his head when he drew his last breath, cried, "Oh, don't let the awkward squad fire over me!"

How curious, indeed, the Lord Thurlow should have cried out as he passed away, "I'm shot if I don't believe I'm dying!"

"Ah! 'mes enfans,' you cannot cry as much for me as I have made you laugh in my time!" so said the brilliant wit of France, Scarron, as he lay dying that hour with a host of weeping friends around him.

It was a Christian philosopher like John Locke who exclaimed with his latest breath, that solemn day, "Oh, the depth of the riches of the goodness and knowledge of God!"

How strange to think that the great Mirabeau, after a life of such wild discord, should have cried out frantically, as he lay waiting for the last change, "Music! Let me die to the sound of delicious music!"

Washington, with the smile of a saint, looked up into the face of his weeping wife for the last time as she bent over him at Mount Vernon that dismal day, and calmly said, as he crossed his arms above his noble heart, "It is well."

And the last words of Luther's friend, Melanchthon, are wonderfully striking, it seems to me. The former asked him that hour if he desired anything. "No, Luther, no! Nothing, nothing but heaven!" he answered, and died with a smile upon his face.

The ruling passion may be said to have been still strong with Chesterfield when he passed away, for the last words he uttered were, "Give Daytolles a chair!"

Did poor Cowper say anything before he died—he who had always dreaded even the thought of dying? Why, it is said he sank to rest as peacefully as a little child.

Ah, but what did Hobbes, the deist, say just before he gasped his last breath? "I am taking a fearful leap in the dark;" but the sweet Herbert said, "Now, Lord, receive my soul!"

Dear Goldsmith's physician asked him a few moments before he ceased to breathe, if his mind was at ease. His mournful answer was, "No, it is not." And yet was not Goldsmith really as lovely a character at heart, as any man who ever lived?

The deaf Beethoven, whose soul had been full of glorious harmony throughout his life, cried out at last, "Now I shall hear!"

May we not cherish the thought that Byron's thoughts were of God and Heaven when he said at last, so wearily, "I must sleep now."

The sun was shining very brightly in the room where the great Humboldt lay dying, and he said, as he watched the beautiful rays, "How grand the sunlight! It seems to beckon earth to heaven!"

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died on the same day, but one said, with his last breath, "Independence forever!" and the other, "I resign my soul to God—and my daughter to my country."

Sir Thomas More said to an attendant, as he ascended the scaffold on the day of his execution, "I pray you see me safe up, and for my coming down let me shift for myself."

Beautiful Anne Boleyn, just before she knelt down to lay her head on the block, clasped her neck with her hand and said, "It is small, very small, indeed!"

What could have possessed Franklin to say to his friends on his death-bed, "A dying man does nothing well?"

What a strange question for Cardinal Beaufort (or any other man) to ask at the last moment of life, "What! Is there no bribing death!"

Scott said, even when death was creeping very near, "I feel as if I were to be myself again."

And Hood, tired out, whispered only the words, "Dying, dying!"—[Boston Transcript.

SUPPLEMENT.

TINY TOKENS.

I.

The murmur of a waterfall
A mile away,
The rustle when a robin lights
Upon a spray,
The lapping of a lowland stream
On dipping boughs,
The sound of grazing from a herd
Of gentle cows,
The echo from a wooded hill
Of cuckoo's call,
The quiver through the meadow grass
At evening fall—
Too subtle are these harmonies
For pen and rule,
Such music is not understood
By any school:
But when the brain is overwrought
It hath a spell,
Beyond all human skill and power,
To make it well.

II.

The memory of a kindly word
For long gone by,
The fragrance of a fading flower
Sent lovingly,
The gleaming of a sudden smile
Or sudden tear,
The warmer pressure of the hand,
The tone of cheer,
The hush that means, "I cannot speak
But I have heard!"
The note that only bears a verse
From God's own word—
Such tiny things we hardly count
As ministry;
The givers deeming we have shown
Scant sympathy:
But when the heart is overwrought,
Oh, who can tell
The power of such tiny things
To make it well!

MISS CYNTHY'S NEW DRESS.

"Tha' ain't no use of your standin' at that winder all day, Cynthy Pinkerton. Solomon Winterbloom won't go by here no more, since the new road's been cut out; and," with rather spiteful emphasis, "'twon't do you no good if he does."

Cynthy flushed slightly and bit her lip, but made no reply to the words of her sister, the small, dark, blunt-featured woman who sat darning stockings by the kitchen fireplace. Mrs. Peter Pennigood had a talent for making those about her uncomfortable, and one she cultivated industriously.

"It's quare," she continued, meditatively rocking back and forth with irritative complacence, "how much more attention some folks attracts than others. I refused three good offers before I tuck Pennigood, and could hed lots more. But you won't never git married, Cynthy, without you take Jake Potter. I reckon you could hev him. He ain't more'n eighteen, and most too lazy to draw his own breath; you could get along with blackhaws an' persimmons, like the 'possums; but he's your only chance, I reckon. Ef Solomon Winterbloom does want you, he's too big a coward to ever speak, so he might as well not."

Cynthy was certainly not youthful, but her brown eyes were as soft and sweet as any young girl's and the color had a trick of flashing into her cheeks, till they were like wahoo-berries in autumn. They were at their brightest now as she spoke:

"He asked me to go with him over to the Marsh church festival, anyway. But I can't, unless I have a new—"

"For land's sake, don't talk of new dresses!" cried Mrs. Pennigood, her dull, smooth voice taking a shrill tone, "jest now when everything's so high, and the wheat not sold, nor the corn gathered, an' all the young ones got to hev' school close. You oughtn't to gave so much to them heathen varmints over yander. You never do hev no consideration, Cynthy. New dresses ain't so plenty."

"I don't expect one," said Cynthy, quietly. "But I can't go—that's all."

"Can't you fix up your brown alapacky?"

"I've fixed and fixed it over, till it's beyond fixing any more. If I can't look nice, it's of no use to go."

She turned to the window again calmly, but there was a sorely disappointed look in her eyes. She knew that if Solomon ever could get up the courage to speak, and wished to do so, the long ride to the marsh would give him the golden opportunity, and now she saw the chance melting away, and was helpless.

"I cannot even tell him why I won't go," she thought, despairingly.

"Hey, Miss Cynthy!" shouted a loud, hearty voice from the lane; and Cynthy, hastily tying a blue veil over her flax-brown locks, fluttered out as Solomon Winterbloom—the tall, brown-complexioned old bachelor—stopped his team at the bars. "Here's some stuff mammy sent you," he said, handing her a bundle, and then growing red and awkward as her gentle fingers touched his brown ones in taking it, and looking everywhere but at her.

And she blushed and grew quite as embarrassed as he was, and neither could think of the most common-place remark to make.

So Solomon drove off, clutching the reins nervously, and calling himself a fool; and Cynthy entered the kitchen, wondering what he would think of her ridiculous embarrassment.

"What's that truck he gave you?" asked Mrs. Pennigood, who had been watching the proceeding sharply from the window.

"I reckon it's Mrs. Winterbloom's contribution for the South sea islanders," Cynthy answered, beginning rather dejectedly to untie the parcel. "She promised to send it to me so I could take it over to the committee along with mine."

"South sea fiddle-faddles!" said Mrs. Pennigood scornfully. "She'd better send you a dress, seein' you was smart enough to give all your 'arnins to 'em!"

* * * * * * * * *

"I declare to goodness, Solomon Winterbloom, you ain't got a grain of sense. You've done fetched back all this truck I tole you to give to Cynthy Pinkerton for them South sea critters the preacher was tellin' about a Sunday. Reckon ye plum lost your head when ye seen Cynthy."

Solomon dropped the big gourd he had just taken from the cedar water bucket so suddenly that a shower of drops flew all around the kitchen and turned to his mother in blank consternation.

"Then do you know what I must have did mamma?" he asked most solemnly. "I've gave the dress I bought for you to Miss Cynthy. I didn't stop there till I was coming home. Oh, Jimmeny!"

The Widow Winterbloom was one of those who contrive to see a ludicrous side to almost every circumstance, and at those words and the rueful look of her son, she dropped into a chair and threw her head back and laughed until the old wooden chair creaked and groaned, and threatened to break down under the combined weight and mirth of the widow.

"What kinder stuff is it?" she asked at last, wiping the tears from her eyes with her checked apron.

"Red—awful red," said Solomon, with much depression; "kinder like a Ben. Davis apple—ye could see it a mile off."

"Well, men ain't got no sense," said the widow, emphatically, "especially about buyin' dresses. Did ye think I'd be any sich a old lunatic as to be a wearin' of scarlet at my time?"

"I don't know why one woman shouldn't wear red things as well as another," said Solomon, "ef she looks nice in 'em. Miss Cynthy'd look good enough to swaller in that. But oh! land, she'll be mad—she'll be hoppin'! What shill I do?"

"Quit a-worritin," said his mother. "She can't hev you arrested an' hung for it. What'll she be at? 'Taint no killin' matter."

"But, mammy, how it looks for me to be givin' her a dress, like as if she didn't hev bushels of 'em, as, of course, she has. An' me never hardly darin' to speak to her—not but what I wanted to. She's the proud kind; she'll be mad. I know she'll be mad. Everything's knocked over."

"Can't you go an' tell her the mistake, you piece of foolishness?"

"Like as not she won't listen to no explanation. She'll be too mad."

"She'll be madder if you don't let her keep the dress," said the matter-of-fact widow. "But go ahead. Men is men."

Solomon, with despair in his heart, and his straw hat over his eyes, was bolting down the path, when he became conscious of a pink calico dress and a gray tie-down hat entering the gate, and to his infinite surprise he beheld Cynthy, who gave him a shy nod, and looked inclined to run away.

"I wanted to thank your mother, and to tell her how pleased I was—that is, if it was really for me and not the heathen," she said.

"The second fool I've made of myself today," thought Solomon, who forgot to tell her I sent it."

Cynthy tried to [illegible] past him, but his love [illegible] with an unwonted courage and stopped her.

"Cynthy—Oh, wait, Cynthy!" he said. "I am a fool, but I will say I'd be the happiest fool in the world if you'd let me buy your dresses always! if Shucks! I'll have to get mammy to ask you for me, if you won't run me ravin' distracted by sayin' I shan't."

Cynthy broke into a clear ripple of laughter, and for the first time in his presence her confusion disappeared.

"How funny you are Solomon!" she said; "and I think it's a heap nicer to have you ask me your own way than for your mother to."

When the widow looked out and saw Solomon and Cynthy under the pear-tree she remarked:

"I reckon Sol. made a lucky mistake, somehow. She's welcome to the dress for all me; and if Sol. ain't been green to let out about it, I shan't."

Oklahoma Payne's Reasons for Invading Indian Territory.

A Chicago Times correspondent has interviewed Captain Payne, the Oklahoma raider, who was arrested in Indian territory, August 29, and says: "He (Payne) was easily approached and seemed to like to be interviewed. He said the Ninth cavalry arrested his party in the territory and brought them through to Henrietta, from which place they came by the Fort Worth and Denver road to the Texas and Pacific at Fort Worth last evening. "Our policy," he continued, "is not to resist the government, so we came along with the troops when we were told to come. We believe we have the right to settle in Oklahoma, and we desire a final decision in the matter by the government. We are assured that this will be the last arrest made for the offense. There is a class of people who are eternally howling that they are are afraid the white will crowd the Indian. They are the people who sit in their houses, cut off their coupons, and read gush about the poor Indian. They don't want farms and a living. They have already got them, and have no sympathy for those who are poor and want homes. They would rather see the poor man starve than to have their picture of the noble red man chasing the wild gazelle over an eternal meadow with babbling brooks destroyed. The government is getting into an awkward position with the Indian. Here, the other day, it granted a railroad the right to go into the territory and run it, thereby asserting the right of eminent domain to be in the government, which should exercise it by giving the poor man a chance to cultivate the best land on earth, which is in the territory, as well as allow the rich man to run his cars over it. We want a test case made. If we can get properly before the courts we have no fear of the result. The only thing we have to fight is a false and silly sentiment. Time will cure this, and I have no hesitancy in saying that within the next five years Oklahoma will be settled by white people, and that it will be as prosperous a community as there is in this country. We intend to fight this matter out. We have gone in to win and will do so. We were not much inconvenienced by the arrest. In fact, we are prepared for it."

Work of a War Correspondent.

War correspondents lead exciting and adventurous lives. They can never be certain of a peaceful half hour at home, and when one campaign is ended may at any moment expect to be dispatched to share the trials of another. Nor is it only that they are continually on the move. While actually at their work they must be prepared to face danger, endure hardship and exposure. More than all, they must, if they would give loyal service to the journals they represent, be men of iron constitution, with boundless energy and power of endurance. A new proof of their value has just been afforded by one of the most distinguished of their number. Mr. Cameron, who has long been on the staff of the Standard, which paper he represents in India and the Transvaal, is now in Egypt, adding fresh laurels to his reputation. His report of the fight at Kassassin on the 28th was one of the finest things he has done, and rivaling the exploits of such men as McGahan and Forbes. With the skilful prescience which is not the least of the gifts of a true correspondent, he had attached himself to the cavalry brigade under Drury Lowe. It had already been actively engaged at Mahsamieh, and was so near the next advanced post that it was certain to come in for any fighting in progress. Cameron was not disappointed. He found himself on the spot to accompany the cavalry through all their movements on that arduous day, and rode with them in their flank march which so completely decided the fight. Having witnessed the charge of the Household cavalry and its successful results, he knew that the worst was over, and that it was now his business to get the good news home. He had been in the saddle the whole of a trying tropical day; it was now night, and twenty-four miles of trackless dessert interposed between him and Ismailia, the point from which he could best telegraph to England. Nothing daunted by these tremendous difficulties, he set forth to ride back to the canal alone. The long journey must have sorely tried his strength; nevertheless, at the end of it he penned one of the most masterly and graphic dispatches ever penned by a war correspondent.—London Home News.

Mothers-in-Law in India.

That the youthful wives of the budding Hindu are very much under the personal jurisdiction of their mother-in-law has always been regarded as a peculiar fact in Indian sociology; but the appalling consequences which result from this arrangement have rarely been brought to light in so forcible a manner as in a case of female suicide which has recently been the subject of inquiry in Bombay. It was proved that the girl, almost a child in age, who had committed the dread act of self-destruction, had been driven to it by the persistent persecution which she had undergone at the ruthless hands of her husband's mother ever since her marriage. In directing the jury, the coroner stated the remarkable fact that by far the largest number of female Hindu suicides are those of women between the ages of twelve and twenty; and it is beyond question that the cause which impels these hapless maidens to put an end to their existence, just when at an age to reap most enjoyment from it, is in nearly every case the organized despotism of the mother-in-law in the interior of the zenana. How this state of affairs is to be remedied is difficult to see, although in the instance referred to, the coroner declared the need of a complete change in Hindu social habits. The change which would be effectual is for the young Hindu not to bring his wife home to the maternal mansion, but to set up house for himself with his matrimonial partner, according to European custom. This, however, would be such a complete revolution in native habit, seeing that several generations usually live and have their being under the same roof-tree, that centuries would be necessary to bring it about.—London Telegraph.

Speculating on the Fickleness of Youth.

I met a young man yesterday who asked me whether I thought the reported wedding of a well-known young lady in Atlanta would take place at the time alleged to be appointed. I gave my opinion and then asked him if he was interested in the lady in question. "Oh, no," he replied, "I do not even know her." "Why, then, do you want to know about her marriage?" "Oh, I have bought four matrimonial policies of $3000 each on her, and I'm anxious to know if I'll get my money." "Does she know of this?" "Oh, no. That isn't necessary. Anybody can take out a policy on anybody else. If you know of a lady that is engaged and will not marry within five months from the time you take a policy on her, you can get any amount on her wedding that you want. I suppose there is $25,000 or perhaps double that on the young lady I asked you about." "How does the company make its money?" "I suppose it bets on the fickleness of the young folks. No policy will be paid except five months after it is taken out."—H. W. Grady, in the Atlanta Constitution.

Lord Byron and His Sister.

Some weeks ago we stated our intention of printing a considerable mass of correspondence throwing light on the life of Lord Byron. Since this announcement was made we have received an intimation that the publication of these letters would be distasteful to several members of the Leigh and Byron families. This is somewhat surprising, for, as we mentioned, the effect of publishing the correspondence and a further examination confirms the opinion we expressed—would be to prove the groundlessness of the horrible suggestion made public in 1869, and we should have supposed that the representatives of the Leigh family would have desired to see Mrs. Leigh's memory cleared of the aspersions of Mrs. Beecher Stowe. There is nothing in the documents that does not redound to the credit of Lord Byron and his sister. Still, as we wish as far as may be to defer to the wishes of their relatives, we shall not for the present take further steps in the matter.—London Athenæum.

There is a disease which produces pains about the body that thousands of people treat for Rheumatism but are never cured. This disease affects the heart and the entire nerve system, and is wasting and debilitating to the entire body. There is an absolute cure for this disease and those who may suffer in this respect will be informed of the cause of it and of its presence by an examination by Dr. Pratt, who on an examination of the action of the heart will point out the disease without asking a question.
